COUNTY DETECTIVE WILL INSPECT DANCE HALLS

Bryan Directs Visits Be Made To Dance Halls

Inspections Are In Line With New Provisions Of State Law

DISTRICT ATTORNEY CONTROLS LICENSES

No Complaints Have Been Made, But Law Requires Inspection

Acting under the instructions of District Attorney J. Elder Bryan, County Detective William Fleming last evening inaugurated an inspection of the outlying or township dance halls as they are known, which are scattered throughout the county and are approximately ten in number.

The inspection is being made in accordance with the provisions of the new dance hall law passed by the last legislature and which became effective June 1, 1927, which gives the district attorney unusual and complete control of all dance halls outside the cities or boroughs of the county.

To Visit All Dance Halls

All the dance halls of the county outside the city of New Castle and the boroughs of the county will be visited by the county detective, not only for the purpose of determining whether the dances conducted at these places are in accordance with the law and conducted on a high moral plane, but also for the purpose of determining whether or not they have taken out the required state license, which costs $10, and if not, to require them to secure the same without delay, if in the opinion of the district attorney and the county detective, they are suitable places and properly managed for the dance hall purposes.

The licenses are issued by the county treasurer to township dance halls, when recommended by the district attorney as meeting all the requirements of the law. Only those which comply with the health and fire regulations will be granted licenses.

Bryan Has Sole Power

District Attorney Bryan has the sole power in this county, under the provisions of this new act to revoke dance hall licenses, when he deems that it is best that they should be closed. Where a license is revoked another may not be granted for the place until six months time has

LITTLE KING VIEWS BODY IN SILENCE

Bayonets Now Guard Little King Everywhere He Goes

(International News Service)

BUCHAREST, July 22.—Peasants, dressed in their gaudy, picturesque costumes, streamed into Bucharest today from all parts of the kingdom to visit Cotroceni Castle, where King Ferdinand's body is lying in state and to witness the funeral cortege on Sunday.

The body, attired in its military uniform, lies in a plain oaken coffin, with gold trimmings, in the central hall of the palace with sword and crown beside it. There is an honorary guard of soldiers in the palace and another outside.

Little King Taken to Scene

Little King Michael, the five-year-old monarch of Roumania, whose rule will be conducted by a council of regency until he is 18, unless a coup upsets the regency in the meantime, was taken to see his grandfather and he gazed solemnly at the wasted features without saying a word.

The army and navy has sworn loyalty to the new boy king. Bayonets guard the little fellow wherever he goes abroad. He cannot play at liberty as he did two or three days ago.

Little Michael will be the central figure of interest when the funeral is held Sunday. The date of the funeral was set originally for Saturday, but it was postponed 24 hours to enable King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia, son-in-law of the late king, to arrive here from Belgrade.

A bearing was broken, and it penetrated the crank case, doing some damage. The auto belonging to Welch was damaged about the front part of the machine.

Lindbergh Will Hop Off Today From Providence

Will Arrive In Boston Sometime During Afternoon; Given Great Reception

(International News Service)

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 22.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who was alluded to as a "chevalier of the air, whose sincerity and composure have won the accolade of kingdoms and Republics" by Governor Aram J. Pothier of this state, awakened today with the echoes of the greatest reception ever accorded an individual by Providence, still ringing in his ears.

Having given yesterday to the city and the multitude that thronged the streets and fairly fought for an opportunity to see him, Colonel Lindbergh claimed this morning for his own. He was to hop off from the Quonset Point field at Wickham for Boston about 1 o'clock.

Speaking before a great assembly of the state's leading personages last night, Colonel Lindbergh emphasized the necessity of flying fields near every large city. He recalled the nearness of Le Bourget to Paris and the landing fields in Brussels and at Croyden, which he visited when in Europe.

Planning Board Approves Change

Will Ask Bids For Paving Work On Three Streets

Council Directs Work On Young, Mills, Boyles And Edgewood

EDGEWOOD AVE. HAS DELEGATION

Councilmen Are Not All In Favor Of Same Improvements

Council today instructed the city clerk to advertise for bids for the paving of Young street, Mills Way, East Boyles and Edgewood avenue.

Councilman Burns opposed Mills Way improvement and Councilman Tyler voted for Edgewood avenue but declared himself opposed to improving the other three thoroughfares. The motion to have the clerk advertise for bids was offered by Councilman Genkinger and seconded by Councilman Davies.

Delegation Present.

When council reached council chambers this morning they found a delegation headed by Ira Ramsey, representing 70 per cent of Edgewood avenue property owners who asked that the avenue, between Highland avenue and Carlisle street be improved.

Councilman Burns informed Mr. Genkinger who said the avenue should be paved that recently councilmen had decided not to undertake any more paving programs until the city could establish the amount of funds available so the jobs could be carried through.

Burns told his colleagues that only $50,000 is available, after which he declared resurfacing of Crawford avenue is a necessity and said it is more important as a traffic artery than Mills way whereupon Genkinger said Mills way improvement would not cost the city a cent.

Would Cost $10,000

Genkinger added that resurfacing of Crawford avenue would result in an expenditure of about $10,000, whereupon Burns replied he never has yet seen a street improved which did not cost the city something, meaning the reference to Mills way.

Councilman Tyler directed a question to Burns, asking "Have you ever been over West Washington street?" The superintendent of finance declared "yes" and Tyler followed with the statement that "it is as bad as Cedar street."

"The upper end of Croton avenue is bad, also" said Burns.

"Butler avenue is in bad shape," said Genkinger.

These sallies brought on a deluge of remarks including one from Tyler to the effect that "we planned to set down and consider what improvements are needed most. I do not see why we should not take up the ones of the most benefit."

Councilman Davies followed with a statement that "I have not said a word about some of the streets which I think should be repaired" and members of the delegation said that Edgewood avenue should be improved.

Ramsey said that approximately 70

Younger the King the Better, Says Beverly's Mayor

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 22.—When they crowned the little King Michael yesterday over in Roumania, the only words he uttered were:

"Come on, mamma, let's go home. I am hungry."

Those are the truest words ever uttered by a king, for the best thing they do is eat.

However, I saw the movies of the last inauguration and Mr. Coolidge looked so bored it looked like he said:

"I wish they would hurry up and get done here, Grace, I am getting hungry."

Lots of people over here think the Roumanian king is too young. You can't get 'em too young; the younger they are the better kings they make.

PROHIBITION IS GAINING

Pennington Says Prohibition Is Gaining In This District

PITTSBURGH, July 22.—John D. Pennington, federal prohibition administrator for Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia believes prohibition is gaining.

Pennington was on record today with the statement that the task of enforcing the national prohibition laws is gradually making headway through the confidence of the law abiding citizens.

The administrator believes that public confidence and respect for the prohibition department is necessary to make enforcement effective. He stated that he does not believe in spectacular methods of administering the law.

"Enforcement of the dry laws must be made in an honest, decent, efficient and courteous manner. When I am unable to conduct this office according to those ideals, my resignation will promptly be submitted," Pennington said.

No Appeal Taken On Viaduct At Wampum

Word has just been received at the office of John P. Lockhart, attorney for the county commissioners, that no appeal has been entered against the construction of the Wampum-Chewton viaduct. Therefore the building of the much needed improvement is assured and work on the plans and construction can go forward without delay.

Thirty days are allowed any interested parties the chance to appeal against the decision of the state public service commission and as those 30 days are up and no appeal has been filed the project can go forward without delay.

This viaduct which was approved by the public service commission last month lies between Wampum and Chewton and crosses the P. and L. E. and B. and O. railroads and the Beaver river, thus eliminating two dangerous crossings and furnishes a good span over the river.

By the action of the commission Lawrence county is to build the improvement and furnish the material, while the two railroads, the state highways department and the Borough of Wampum and township are to reimburse the county according to an allotment made by the commission.

O. H. Milholland, county engineer, says that he will be able to proceed with the making of detail plans for the viaduct now and then afterwards the plans must be approved by the art commission, the U. S. war department and waterways commission. Their approval having been obtained, bids will be asked for and contract let for the actual construction of the improvement.

Drinking Bootleg Liquor Is Similar To Death Flirting

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, July 22.—If you drink bootleg liquor it's a 3,000-to-1 shot you're gambling with death. At least thats' the opinion of Dr. J. M. Doran, prohibition commissioner.

Doran declared today that the quality of bootleg is lower than at any time since prohibition has become effective. Moonshine is regarded as even more dangerous than liquors produced from redistilled industrial alcohol. The old-time art of moonshining, developed in the southern mountains as a protest against liquor taxes, has been lost except in remote districts, according to Doran.

Border Patrol Is Again In Service Along Lake Shore

Lake Shipping Knows Ohio Coast As "Ontario's Gold Coast", Is Report

LIQUOR SMUGGLING REPORTED INCREASING

Many Strategies Being Used By Rum Runners From Canada

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

CLEVELAND, O., July 22.—Three hundred miles of Lake Erie shore line between Toledo, O., and Erie, Pa., along which there are only two United States customs boats, is known to lake shipping men as "Ontario's gold coast". It is the fairyland of rum runners, who have organized the business of supplying Ohio, founding place and the world headquarters of the Anti-Saloon League.

Despite the hazards of open lake navigation and the combined efforts of the state and federal enforcement organizations, the Canadian liquor smuggling traffic on historic Lake Erie has expanded at such an alarming rate during recent months that it has forced the re-establishment here of the border patrol force abandoned in March 1926, when customs officers believed the Ohio's rum row had been wiped out.

Trucked Inland.

Resuming operations on the 300 mile patrol with 14 men and two boats after an open season of 15 months, Customs Collector A. P. Fenton, in charge of the Cleveland operating base, found the smuggling trade again enmeshed deeply in the legitimate lake commerce.

Although Cleveland's liquor receipts are considerably larger than a year ago, they are still relatively unimportant as compared with the volume of Canadian stocks entering Detroit and

Arthur Mometer

He isn't talking very much, although he says hello, but gosh that youngster's built of springs, the way that he can go. He starts in at his bedroom and he races down the hall, and the wonder to his mother is just why he doesn't fall. His legs seem just like pistons and he covers many miles, but the damage that he causes he replaces with his smiles. When he grins your heart just quickens, when he laughs the world is pink, and there must be springs of happiness within that kid I think. Don't know what we did before he came, this laughing little tike, for he fills the house with joy all day, and although sometimes you'd like, to put some four wheel brakes on him, his grins just make you gay, and he keeps right on a racing, weather's seventy today.

Women Give Honor To Florence Allen

(International News Service)

OAKLAND, Cal., July 22.—Judge Florence E. Allen of the supreme court of Ohio today was named by the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs in convention here as the outstanding professional woman in the United States whose success has been won against great odds.

The convention named Edna Browning Ruby, of Lafayette, Ind., artist, designer, lecturer, as the most outstanding business woman in the nation.

Judge Allen is a graduate of the Western Reserve university of Cleveland. She was graduated with a degree of A. M. in political science and constitutional law, 1906. She later studied at the Chicago university and at New York university law school.

She paid her own way through school, and found decided obstacles against her among men in their opposition to women entering law.

Judge Allen was the first woman lawyer who appeared before the national war labor board. She presented the case of woman street car conductors.

She was the first woman to sit in the court of general jurisdiction and the first woman in the world to preside in a case of first degree murder.

Will Not Probe Sharkey's Claim

New York State Athletic Commission Not To Intervene In Case

NEW YORK, July 22.—The New York state athletic commission will not institute an inquiry into the claim of Jack Sharkey that he was fouled by Jack Dempsey last night, James A. Farley, its chairman, clearly indicated today, in a formal statement, he stood by the decision of the referee, Jack O'Sullivan.

The statement read:

"I have nothing to say, other than that the referee, who was assigned to the bout, rendered his decision as he saw it. This commission never has reversed the decisions of its officials. Referee O'Sullivan has always been considered by the newspapermen who write boxing as being a most efficient and competent referee."

Green Puts Stop To Grievances Of Labor Delegates

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Inflamatory attacks on the foreign policy of the United States in its dealings with Latin American republics, coupled with charges that the machinery of this government was being used in the interest of Wall Street bankers, caused President William Green to call a halt in such tactics on the part of Latin American delegates to the Pan-American Federation of Labor in session here today.

Green warned the delegates that the gathering is not a clearing house for the political ills of Latin America. He cautioned the delegates must not seek to use the convention to air such grievances.

The Suwanee river, of song fame, rises in Georgia, flows through Florida and empties into the Gulf of Mexico.

elapsed. The penalty for violation of the state law is $25 payable to the county.

Under the provisions of the act, children under sixteen years of age may not attend dances in these halls unless accompanied by their parents. The hours during which dances may be held are from 9 p. m. to 1 a. m., except on Saturday nights. Sunday dancing is strictly prohibited. Under special provisions of the act, dances may be permitted until 2 a. m. except on Saturday nights.

The law does not apply to dances held in townships by fraternal, soldier, labor or firemen's organizations.

The law provides that the district attorney can and must require state police officers, constables and county detectives to investigate all such dance halls.

District Attorney Bryan stated today that no complaints had been received so far this year concerning any of the township dance halls of Lawrence county.

Daniels Addresses Loan Association Members In Session

(International News Service)

ASHEVILLE, N. C., July 22. — More homes owned by their occupants and less tenancy is the imperative call in the country today, Joseph Daniels, wartime secretary of the navy, told the American League of Building and Loan Association convention today.

"If you will look at the tremendous increase in the saving of investments, in stocks and bonds, and in life insurance, you will be rebuked for calling this a generation of spendthrifts," Daniels said.

WILL ASK BIDS FOR PAVING WORK ON THREE STREETS

per cent of the property owners desire the improvement. Solicitor White said that four owners had expressed themselves in opposition to the paving and had alleged there were still others opposed to it.

White expressed the belief that council should ask for another petition in view of the fact that the method of paying for improvements has undergone a change and council had told citizens no improvements would be forced upon property owners.

Burns thought it best to lay the matter over until the opponents could attend council Monday and express their views but Ramsey told councilmen that "a fight can be stirred up on anything" and said two petitions had been presented by a majority of the interested.

Council adopted Ramsey's views and Councilman Genkinger's motion, instructing the city's clerk to ask for bids for paving Edgewood, East Boyles, Mills Way and Young street was put to a vote and met with a divergence of views.

"I am in favor of all except Mills way," voted Burns.

"I am in favor of Edgewood avenue but opposed to the others," said Tyler meaning that council should study what improvements are needed first.

"Why are you opposed to Mills way when it does not cost the city a cent?" asked Genkinger of Burns.

"Because the people cannot understand why we do not fix south Jefferson street in the Eighth ward and then go ahead with an 18 foot pavement in Mills way."

After voting for the advertisement for bids Davies answered Burns by saying: "That's easy to understand —because the people pay for it. Mayor Dunlap also voted for the proposed improvements.

1928 Buick Cars On Display Here Saturday, July 23

In the New Castle News of Thursday, July 21 appeared an advertisement of the Lawrence Automobile company on the new 1928 Buicks. This advertisement was inserted thru error as the new Buicks will not be on display at the local dealers' salesroom until Saturday, July 23. At this time models of various cars will be ready for public inspection. This statement is made that the premature appearance of the advertisement may not prove embarrassing to the Lawrence Automobile company.

Town Talk

"Gimme a little kiss, will yuh, huh?" was the plea of one south side man to another man's wife. But to the wife this looked like monkey business, so she told her husband, who immediately called on the services of Alderman Cooper.

As a result the alderman's office was in a furore. Could it be called a crime to express a desire to kiss another man's wife? was the point of law involved. "No," said Alderman Cooper, and "No", said a policeman. But still the alderman was in doubt. Everyone who entered the alderman's court that afternoon were asked to give expert opinion on the legality of the request. And all were of the opinion that it was no crime to ask another man's wife for a kiss, providing that the asker did not place his hands on the askee when he made the request.

Because of this, and the non-appearance of the persons involved when the case was set, the case was dropped.

Alderman Cooper refused to reveal any names.

Toledo, according to prohibition operatives. Little of the Cleveland stock goes beyond the city by truck, whereas at the western end of Lake Erie, almost half of the Toledo landings are trucked inland to Ohio, Michigan and Indiana, some of it reaching as far west as Chicago and as far south as Cincinnati.

Besides being twice as far from the Ontario shores as Toledo, Cleveland's smugglers are hampered grieviously by District Attorney A. E. Bernsteen, celebrated throughout the country as one of the most drastic prohibition prosecutors in the department of justice. The federal courts at Cleveland, also are noted along the Ontario border as exceptionally severe in dealing with prohibition law violators. These factors, combined with the greater hazards of navigation in the open lake to Cleveland, bring Canadian whiskey to $10.00 a quart here, as against $4.00 to $5.00 in Detroit and $4.50 to $6.00 in Toledo.

851 Convictions.

Even these handicaps, however, have not driven the elusive rum craft from Lake Erie and 851 prohibition convictions in the federal courts for the northern Ohio district in the year ending July 1 have had little influence upon the speed boat traffic and blind cargoes which are the main source of supply for Cleveland, Akron, Youngstown, Canton, Sandusky, Toledo, and Columbus.

Only ten prosecutions in the Cleveland and Toledo federal court last year involved lake carriers in the liquor trade. Only four seizures have been made since the re-establishment of the Toledo-Erie patrol on June 1.

In addition to maintaining a constant vigil along 300 miles of open coast, Cleveland's force is required to keep a watchful eye on the important ports of Toledo, Cleveland, Sandusky, Port Clinton, Lorain, Ashtabula and Erie, each of which has numerous private docks to afford refuge to the smaller carriers of the outlawed trade.

While the two customs boats skirt the coast's "hot points" in an attempt to drive off the high powered motor launches which dart in almost at will, lake steamers push into the public docks to land blind cargoes of 50 to 200 cases. When the customs officials direct their limited equipment to the wholesale dock shipments, the swift speed boats take up the trade under cover of night to lure the patrol boats again into the open lake.

Need Continuous Guard.

Only a 24 hour shore guard can curb the speed boat traffic, prohibition officials say. Built to move in as little as 6 inches of water, the boats sweep up to the beach wherever their shore signal light tell them the coast is clear. Unloading crews in hip-boots drag the craft to a land anchorage and pass the cargo, man to man, to waiting trucks. Docking facilities are never required.

Taking advantage of the fact that the rum boats cover between 45 and 55 miles an hour as against a mixiumum speed of 30 miles an hour for the United States government patrol craft,, the smugglers have devised a large-scale game of blindman's-buff for the entire Ohio border.

Surrounding a huge steamer of the rum confederacy just beyond the international line, a dozen or more of the swift gasoline launches upon running afoul one of a customs boat, demands in effect that the dry agents guess who is carrying the liquor, the mother ship or the convoy. If the agents elect to give chase to the convoy boats the fleet scatters in all directions and quickly outdistance the slower government boat; if the patrol forces stop to examine the cargo of the steamer, the spider fleet races to shore and is unloaded, before the customs inspectors are convinced the larger vessel carries no contraband.

Governor Fuller Visits Condemned Slayers In Cell

Sacco-Vanzetti Receive Visit And Talk With Governor Fuller Today

(International News Service)

BOSTON, July 22.—Two hungry and disillusioned men sat in Charleston States prison today and talked with the man who is to decide whether they shall live or die on August 10.

Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, convicted of murder, met Governor Alvan T. Fuller for the first time, when the chief executive visited them in their cells. Scenes filled with drama, as have been all scenes in the cases of the two Italian radicals, were enacted when the governor met the condemned men.

With the pangs of hunger torturing them Sacco and Vanzetti answered the questions of the governor concerning their case. They have been on a hunger strike for the last six days. This morning they again refused their breakfast as they have all meals since Sunday morning.

The hunger strike was inaugurated in protest agaist the methods employed by Governor Fuller in investigating the trial at which they were convicted they requested a public hearing rather than a private investigation.

No comment was forthcoming from Governor Fuller as he left the prison, concerning his conversation with the two men. It was believed that the chief executive was nearing the conclusion of his investigation of the cases and, as a final part of the work, made the visit to obtain the men's own version of the seven-year fight for life and events preceding their arrest and conviction.

Illinois Husbands Put Divorces On Big Business Basis

(International News Service)

CHICAGO, July 22.—Although not incorporated as such, divorce might well be termed a "business", the latest records of the circuit clerk's office reveal with the showing that financial settlements arranged between parting husbands and wives who have appeared before the Chicago divorce courts now aggregate $1,500,000.

The records reveal that 15 per cent of all marriages contracted in the state of Illinois now meet final dissolution in the divorce courts. It is further revealed that 80 per cent of all divorce actions are instituted by the wives, rather than the husbands, and that in the overwhelming majority of cases desertion is given as grounds.

During 1926, the figures reveal, there were 80,000 marriages in Illinois, of which 14,000 unions were dissolved by annulment or divorce. The city of Chicago contributed 40,000 of the marriages and 8,000 of the divorces.

Notwithstanding that 70 per cent of the petitioners during the past year sought no alimony, the total which Illinois men had invested in the "business of divorce" continued to mount steadily, until now it has a capitalization equal to that of many good-sized industrial corporations.

Cleveland Plans Big Welcome For Lindbergh Aug. 1

CLEVELAND, O., July 22.—According to Col. Carmi A. Thompson, chairman, and James L. E. Jappe, executive secretary of the Lindbergh reception committee which will welcome Col Charles Lindbergh, America's lone eagle, when he arrives in Cleveland to visit Myron T. Herrick, ambassador to France, August 1, everything will be done to make the day the fifth city's greatest holiday

It was Herrick who took Lindbergh hobnobbing with diplomatic royalty when the "ace" landed on French soil. Many people claim that it was Herrick who influenced Lindbergh and prevented his just becoming an idol of the public. In appreciation of this Lindbergh expressed his desire to do something for Herrick. The ambassador wish nothing better than to have the young hero visit him at his Cleveland home. So a group of local people headed by Thompson and Jappe went about to make Cleveland's reception of Lindbergh his greatest.

They are trying to make the day a legal holiday so that all the roads will be clear when Lindy comes driving down the street. Lindbergh will be met at the new Cleveland flying field at 2 p. m. There will be an auto parade across the city to the East Side. This will end with a foot parade by local military organizations and will break up at the city hall just in time for dinner which will be served at a downtown hotel.

Brief speeches will be made at the airport and at the Rockefeller park bowl which can accommodate about 30,000 people or more. This is a natural bowl in the city park donated to Cleveland by John D. Rockefeller.

Sees Revolution In Medicine As New Development

(International News Service)

LONDON, July 22.—Discoveries which may revolutionize modern medicine were announced by Sir John Jagadis Bose, the eminent scientist, during the course of a lecture here. Sir Jagadis declared that his recent finding that plant life and animal life are identical had led him to the discovery in plants of an enormous number of medicines which had never been suspected.

Prophesying that plants would in the future supersede vivisection, Sir Jagadis revealed that he had invented a new apparatus, more powerful than the most powerful microscope, which recorded side by side the action of drugs on the tissue of plants and animals, and showed that they both acted in exactly the same manner.

"The time will come," he said, "when most experiments will be carried out on plants. There is nothing in man that has not been foreshadowed in the plant, and thus by experimenting on the plant it is possible to alleviate the sufferings of man.

"Plants are a truer witness of the effect of drugs on human beings than human beings themselves," Sir Jagadis contended. "for plants are devoid of imagination and therefore immune to auto-suggestion.

"Tests have been carried out with thousands of plants, and the value of many new drug extracts from plants have been tried out on other plants. It has been possible to show that the pulsation of plants will slow down and quickly cease after the injection of a large dose of cobra poison, but will be revived by a further injection of diluted poison. This shows that the activity of one poison is neutralized by the activity of another."

Pan-American Labor Federation Continues Session

Delegates From Dozen Countries Are Attending Conference

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, July 22—The Pan-American Federation of Labor convention today continued its consideration of resolutions proposed by various Latin-American delegations looking to the betterment of conditions for the working classes of the republics to the south.

These resolutions almost without exception, bear a direct relation upon political conditions in those countries to the end that they be summed up as a composite declaration of the political views of the organized Latin-American workers.

Delegates from every one of the dozen countries represented, principally from the West Indies, Central America and the Carribbean states of South America have one or more political problems on which the federation is asked to take a stand. These bear on international relations as much as purely domestic problems.

While some of the resolutions as originally proposed are couched in strongly aggressive and denunciatory language, they are toned down to conservative declarations by the time they have run the gamut of the resolutions committee presided over by Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor.

This was evidenced in the treatment of the present Nicaraguan situation, when the committe late yesterday brought in a mildly worded substitute for the fiery denunciation of American intervention offered on Tuesday by the Nicaraguan delegates. The committee substitute expressed "regret for the events having occurred recently in Nicaragua" and directed a "respectful but emphatic petition" for the immediate withdrawal of all American armed forces from Nicaragua.

It was adopted by a unanimous rising vote.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—New Zealand is trying to suppress the use of the words "Australasia" and "Australasian," at least insofar as they concern New Zealand, according to a letter sent to the state department by the American Consul General at Wellington, N. Z., W. L. Lowrie.

The letter, sent out by the Associated Chambers of Commerce of New Zealand, declares that for several years business men of that dominion "have sought to discourage the use of these terms in the hope of their eventual elimination. We know what the words are intended to convey, but people overseas who have little knowledge of this portion of the world may be excused for thinking that the terms refer to a land somewhere in, or to the south of, Asia.

"Those who do know of the extence of Australia probably regard them as descriptive of a greater Australia. Either way, it is unfair to New Zealand.

"We desire the world to know of the existence of New Zealand and also that our identity is separate and apart from that of Australia."

LOCAL HISTORICAL RELIC ROOM

SUGGESTION that has been offered that a local permanent historical relic room be arranged in the Scottish Rite Cathedral, a project that is being given serious consideration by those in charge of the magnificent building, is one that "listens well" to us.

Certain it is that there are many collections of valuable relics and historical materials being preserved by families in this city that would be presented for display in this exhibition. The idea of such an exhibition room has been discussed frequently, but the lack of a place that would be permanent has hindered development.

With the guarantee that would be given of permanency of such an institution at the cathedral, this one objection is removed.

Several have already offered valuable collections, and once it is formally decided to go through with the project there would doubtless be many others, as there are many in the city, some of them almost priceless.

It appears to us that the concensus of opinion of New Castle residents would be behind such an undertaking.

ADVERTISING DID IT

THE name "Lindbergh" and its contractions and variations "Lindy" and "Lucky Lindy" have been given to articles of clothing, foods, toys and other merchandise. Songs have been written for phonograph records, player piano rolls and sheet music with Colonel Lindbergh and his epic flight as their theme.

One might prefer to look upon all these christenings as in commemoration of the charting of "Lindy's Lane" and as monuments honoring the valiant young aviator. But the least cynical must admit that it was commercialization pure and simple. Manufacturers and publishers used Lindbergh's name to sell their goods. However, the fact that the name sold the goods in amazing quantities proclaimed the greatness of the flyer louder than the Paris, London, New York, Washington and St. Louis crowds could have had they been combined into one howling mob.

But why did this hitherto unknown name sell goods in record quantities?

Advertising did it.

An unknown flew out of the West, paused a moment on the shores of the Atlantic and alighted some thirty hours later on the opposite shore. Newspapers, the radio, the movies and the tongues of millions advertised the feat and the name of the man who performed it until both were in the eyes and on the lips of the world. So well were Lindbergh and the "Spirit of St. Louis" advertised that mere association of the names with merchandise assured a tremendous and spontaneous demand for it.

Newspaper advertising, whether it be in the news columns or the pages of advertisements, has written finis to the time when "full many a flower is born to blush unseen and waste its sweetness on the desert air."

QUIT SLOUCHING

A WELL known school, giving a summer course in physical education, is making a vigorous drive against the "debutante slouch."

"We are determined to wage war against this ridiculous and incorrect posture which the young girls have been affecting in the name of fashion," says the school head.

"There is nothing more graceful and attractive than a correct standing and walking posture. I am trying to show the girls that. But our greatest concern is the after-effects of such posture, leading to ill-health."

More power to such teaching! The physical attitudes of the present generation of young girls, copied, heaven only knowns why, by many of their elders who should know better, would have been incredible in any past age. May they be incredible hereafter—as incredible as the sartorial styles we wonder at today in old tin-types.

The teachers, however, may succeed better by showing the objectionable posture to be "ridiculous" than physiologically or artistically "incorrect." To the smart young person, whatever "they" are doing is "correct."

Also, how does the weak tire know you're not carrying a spare?

Well, it looks as if Henry Ford is going into the business of airplane manufacture in earnest. Look out below!

TODAY'S STORYETTE

A traveling man put up one night in a cheap little hotel, where the thin partitions of a range of bedrooms, like the stalls of a stable, stopped halfway to the ceiling. And in the stilly watches of the night he laid awake and listened to the finest demonstration of plain and fancy snoring that it had ever been his fate to hear. It was filled with sudden and awful variations. Sometimes strangulation seemed imminent; there in the middle of a fantasia the agony stopped suddenly and there was silence.

From a nearby room he heard a voice exclaim wearily, "Thank goodness! Hes' dead!"

Of course, the chap who instigated roasting ears also boosted humanity about 200 per cent in joy. The bird who is responsible for near beer will never have a monument erected to his memory unless he pays for it himself.

A disorganized political condition in a community is a decided disadvantage to that community. This has been demonstrated when good roads have been built, when men could have been appointed to political office, and in many other ways. The leaders in the Republican party do not care what happens in a community where their party does not control, and we are sure that you will all agree that the Democrats are not any different. Where there is no organization there are no results and many instances where it has affected Lawrence county can be cited. Did you ever hear of the disorganizer doing anything except what he can get for himself? Neither did we!

During the past six months the number of newspapers printed in the English language in the United States has dropped from 2,001 to 1,952, the largest decrease during any period in the history of the newspaper business. Sir Oliver Lodge says the ether is the most important reality of the physical universe. Life and mind are associated with matter only indirectly through the ether, he says, and the ether is primarily man's habitation, not pseudo "solid matter," earth houses, automobiles and money that we call the real world.

Matter reduced to atoms is only electric particles revolving at frightful speed around an electric center. The real thing is ether.

* * *

Science tells us the ether is like a great stream of water, flowing on forever, and matter like a fisherman's net spread across the stream through which the ether flows, that ether is essential to the cosmic scheme, that Newton's law of gravitation should not work without it, and that ether is the only solid reality in the realm of ideas. But for the average man it is hard to conceive of ether as a reality. It seems as unreal as the fourth dimension.

Our minds are adjusted to the work we have to do, which isn't big or very important.

VACATION

Two weeks to play the dreamer,
The youth, the millionaire;
To shun the sordid schemer
And turn my back on care.
Two weeks of idle pleasure!
How swiftly they will run
Along with all my treasure!
But that's the way with fun.

Old Duty drives for fifty,
And cracks his whip at me,
Industrious and shrifty,
And punctual I must be.
Then I must rise to labor
And envy those who play,
But now there is no neighbor
Whose place I want today.

These weeks men call vacation
From toil will set me free,
The greatest in the nation
No happier can be.
I'll revel deep in beauty,
I'll fish and golf and swim,
And no command from duty
Shall interrupt my whim.

I'll lie where summer breezes
With ripples flute the streams,
And only that which pleases
Shall break into my dreams.
Should one who rules a nation
In pomp go riding by,
I'll say, on my vacation,
As great as you am I.

In the course of his tour he plans to spend an entire month in Canada. Lieut. Col. Amery has had an unusually active and varied career since he first entered the public service some 25 years ago. After completing his education at Oxford, where he won high honors, he joined the editorial staff of The Times and organized the war correspondence for that paper in the South African war. In the early period of the great war he saw service in Flanders, Salonika and the Balkans. In 1917 he was a member of the Imperial war cabinet and was on the staff of the war council of Versailles. He has travelled extensively in the Near East and in all the British dominions.

CALVIN, THE SCOT

I believe that there are few facts touching the man Calvin Coolidge that have not been given as important a place in history as they deserve. It was the custom and habit of New Englanders to bestow upon their male offspring the names of the Hebrew prophets. When the parents of the President came to christen their child they did not whisper to the parson the name of Isiah, Jeremiah, Ezekial, or even Habakkuk; they had chosen the name of a new prophet, one not mentioned in Holy Scripture, the name of an obstinate Scot, who would neither conform to the liturgy of Rome, or of the English Church, the name of "Calvin". When the characteristics of that exemplar of Protestantism are compared to the characteristics of the President, some may not see the similarity. Calvin was a firebrand. He was not sparing of speech. He never hesitated to express himself and give his opinion upon any subject within the range of his activities; while the President is cannier of speech than any Scot. Yet there is an outstanding characteristic which marked Calvin, and which marks his namesake. It is the President's purposefulness, his unhesitating determination to stand by his principles though the heavens fall.

The citizenry of America got the first touch of that Presidential purposefulness in Coolidge's first message to Congress, when he said, "I am not in favor of a soldiers' bonus"; and the people of this Nation have had that severe earnestness of purpose driven home to them by the President time and again. No namesake of John Calvin ever portrayed his determined spirit any better than Calvin Coolidge.

In these days, when new nostrums are proposed by leaders of public thought for the health of the American people upon every conceivable occasion, it adds to the joyousness of the times to find a man at the head of the Nation who sticks to First Principles, who is unwilling to be swayed by every breeze that blows, and who stands by his guns without fear.

It may be a long time before another New England Pine Tree man will sit in the seat of the Mighty at Washington, and for this reason, if for no other, there should be no hesitation on the part of the American people in electing the President to another four years of office.

Dr. Crane's Editorial

THE MID-WEST MAN

The man from the mid-west is usually the goat of all the intellectuals.

Of course, a good many great folks including Abraham Lincoln and U. S. Grant have come from the mid-west, but the general impression seems to be, to paraphrase George Ade, that "the greater they are the quicker they come."

The mid-west is supposed to be the home of banality. This region is inhabited, according to Mencken, Sinclair Lewis and others, almost predominately by morons. They are the people who form the favorite butt of almost all kinds of ridicule.

They are Rotarians, Kiwanis men and other frequenters of rube clubs.

They are the hayseeds of the world.

The main ambition of most of the people that live in the mid-west is to get away from the country as soon as possible. You can never amount to anything until you come to New York.

The mid-west has Chautauqua circles, fitting descendants for former camp meetings. The inhabitants are low brows who come in for the contempt of all the emancipated and advanced Europeans and easterners.

Did they not put across prohibition?

Did not their wives and daughters even go to prayer meetings?

What could be commoner!

When the World War came, however, those boys from the mid-west, Kansas and thereabouts, did a pretty good job at Belleau Wood and in the Argonne. They fought well and the heroes of Ballaklava and Thermopylae had to move aside and make room for them in the Hall of Fame.

A Missouri boy named Pershing and a couple of Illinois men named Grant and Lincoln demonstrated that something worth while could come out of Nazareth.

And now another mid-westerner, a "dom" Swede, has startled the world.

He took his life in his hand, shoved a tooth brush in his pocket and flew unaided and alone across the perilous Atlantic.

Personally, I think it makes no difference what country a man comes from. A Japanese, a Mexican or a Nebraskan is quite as liable to horn in and monopolize the front page as a noble Roman or distinguished Britisher. Man is man and you can't tell what part of the human race is going to develop a remarkable shoot.

Mr. Lindbergh, upon his arrival in Paris, was greeted like a king. In fact, the kings of the earth, such as the Prince of Wales and the Kings of Spain, Norway and Belgium hastened to do him honor. All Paris was alive with American flags.

It would be hard to find a man that will turn up his nose at the exploit of Mr. Lindbergh.

Mr. Babbitt's country, with its chautauquas and rotarian clubs and prayer meetings is not such a bad place after all.

MY FATHER

Now that Father's Day has passed without a ripple, and hardly anybody knew it was there, I have been thinking about fathers. There's such a variety of them.

My father died at eighty-three. He was built to run a century. It was almost a crime to cut him off so soon. He underwent a severe major operation, and was coming through nicely. A nurse left him uncovered in a draft while he was recovering from ether, and he contracted pneumonia and died. Even so, he struggled ten days and nights for breath before his heart stopped.

He had never used a toothbrush. He thought such things effeminate. But he had all of his teeth except one when he died. That one was extracted in error by a dentist. Another tooth was aching. When my father found that the dentist had taken the wrong tooth, and that the ache was still there, he was furious. He vowed he would never again visit a dentist. And he didn't. The aching tooth stopped aching and was doing excellent service forty years later.

* * *

All his life, my father was a seafaring man, although he spent most of his years in Kansas, where the open prairie stretched for limitless miles, and there was hardly any water. He had been born to the sea, and he always longed to return to it. He died in Kansas, about as far from salt water as a man could well be.

He was born on a little island in Baltimore Bay, near the city of Cork, Ireland. His immediate forebears were fisherman. His father lived to be something more than one hundred and three years old. A few generations back these fishermen had sported an O on the front of their name, and had occupied Baltimore Castle, the ruins of which, I am told, are still there, on an island in the bay. The O'Driscolls were pirates at one time, and I have read several ballades that glorify their piratical deeds.

But my father was born to hard labor at the fishing nets. One day, when he was quite a young blade, he wanted to go to the fair, and asked his old father for two shillings to spend.

"What! Waste your money on the girls, would you! Go on out and catch some more fish, and let the girls alone for a long time yet!" That was the old man's answer. So my father saved his shillings until he had enough to buy two American dollars. Then he got a job on a sailing ship, and worked his passage to New York.

* * *

When he was about thirty years old, my father was stricken with apoplexy. They thought he would not live more than a few hours. In two weeks, he was back shoveling coal on the Erie & Pittsburgh docks, at Erie, Pennsylvania, and he never was troubled with apoplexy again. When he was about fifty he nearly died of typhoid fever. Otherwise, I believe, he was never ill until two weeks before his death. He was a giant in stature, and his voice was more powerful than the voice of any bull on our Kansas farm. He labored prodigiously, save scrupulously, and chewed enormous quantities of tobacco.

Why are the giants passing? Sons they had in plenty, but which of their sons, with all their bathing and shaving and brushing of teeth, can perform the labors of their fathers?

Moffat Tunnel Work Rushed

Railroad Bore Is Holed Through; Tunnel Cost Millions

By M. F. DACEY
International News Service Staff Correspondent

DENVER, July 22.—Holing through of the railroad bore of the Moffatt tunnel last week was celebrated here as a stride toward the day when trains will begin to rush endlessly beneath the continental divide through the longest railroad tunnel on the western hemisphere.

Although there still remains the work of leveling the benches of earth and broadening the sides of the tunnel, engineers connected with the work believe that it will be possible for trains to go through the tunnel by winter. This will eliminate the terrific weather conditions and hardships trainmen have encountered in climbing over James Peak, by cutting off 30 miles of four per cent grades over Rollins Pass where the altitude averages from 9,240 to 11,660 feet.

The Moffat tunnel burrows under the continental divide 50 miles west of here, at an elevation of 9,200 feet above the sea level. The construction started in 1923 with the date for completion set for 1927.

Under High Mountain.

For 6.1 miles the trains will run beneath James Peak, one of the highest peaks of the Colorado Rockies, when the tunnel is completed.

The railroad tunnel measures 16 by 24 feet in size and is built to accommodate a standard size track which will care for the Denver and Salt Lake trains which will use it.

A water tunnel, similar to the main tunnel in length, but measuring only eight by eight feet in width and height, runs along side the railroad tunnel 75 feet south of the center line of the bore. The pioneer bore, which was holed last February 18 by President Coolidge, was used to facilitate the work on the main tunnel. The two were connected during the construction by crosscuts, situated about 1,500 feet apart.

With the completion of the main tunnel the first bore will be used for the transportation of water from the western slope of Colorado for municipal and agricultural purposes in and around Denver. It is designed to carry 430,000 gallons of water a minute.

Is Great Feat.

Construction of the Moffat tunnel is considered one of the greatest railroad engineering feats in modern industry. It marks the realization of the vision of David Moffat, one of Colorado's pioneer empire builders.

In the ecavation of the tunnels, 750,000 cubic yards, or about three billion pounds of rock, which is equivalent to 1,600 freight trains of 40 carloads, have been removed. At either end of the tunnel small towns have been constructed, here, at East Portal and West Portal, have lived the 1,000 men who have been employed on the tunnel.

Not only will the Moffat tunnel cut off a large part of the 4 per cent grade on the D. & S. L. railroad, reducing the maximum grade from four to two per cent, but it will also eliminate much roadbed curvature, and shorten the line by 23 miles.

It is believed that the tunnel will open up one of the richest areas of Colorado. The region which the tunnel will tap is rich in timber, coal, oil, livestock, agricultural and mineral resources. A further advantage will be gained with the construction of the Dotsero cut-off which would join the Denver & Salt Lake line with that of the Rio Grande Western, cutting off 173 miles between Denver and Salt Lake City. This would also place Denver on a through transcontinental route.

Cost $15,000,000.

The tunnel has been constructed at a cost of approximately $15,000,000. It will be paid for by taxation of the tunnel district which includes all the county of Denver, and parts of the counties of Rout, Moffatt, Grant, Summit, Jefferson, Gilpin and Boulder. The Moffat tunnel improvement district is a public corporation under the laws of the state of Colorado, and includes within its boundaries 9,000 square miles. This represents a real estate value in excess of $400,000,000, the population of the area being 350,000.

One world record was established during the construction of the tunnel when 1,583 feet of eight by eight headings were excavated in 30 days by three crews of 16 men each. Altogether 700 miles of drill holes were made during the work and 800,000 pounds of drill steel were used. Blasting took 2,500,000 pounds of dynamite, while 28,000,000 K. W. H. of electric power was used for illumination and to operate the machinery.

Noise Costs Big Sum In London

Professor Declares $5,000,000 Lost Weekly In London Because Of Din

By CHARLES A. SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, July 22.—Declaring that $5,000,000 are lost weekly in London alone as the result of wastage due to the impairment of working capabilities caused by incessant din, Professor Henry J. Spooner, president of the Polytechnic Engineering society and a prominent English engineer, launched an appeal for less street noises during an address here.

Professor Spooner condemned the nerve-wracking street drills, the uproar of the street cars and other devastating noises of modern streets, and declared that the reduction of noise in commercial and industrial work is a paying proposition.

"Metal work done in a noisy distracting atmosphere leads to nervous complaints a dntends to lower efficiency and output," he said. "The mechanical uproar of street cars is the most nerve shattering noise in our streets," he added.

"Tube subways are notorious for their distressing din, and it is a wonder that their awful noise is so patiently tolerated. Worn, ram-shackle noisy motor vehicles should be warned off the streets by the authorities, be reconditioned or scrapped. Horns or hooters should be standardized as to pitch; and a low melodious note adopted.

"Pneumatic rock drills for breaking up roads should not be permitted in the streets of towns, and even noisy machinery should be toned down in some way as a possible cause of accidents through nervous strain."

Professor Spooner pointed out that the noisy surrounding of countless hospitals, nursing homes, colleges and schools is a serious matter calling for the earnest attention of municipal authorities.

KID PARTY AT Y. W. C. A. CAMP

The girls at the Y. W. C. A. camp at East Brook staged a "kid party" last night. They enjoyed "kid" games and performed "kid" stunts.

Before the "kid" affair was held, a grand march was staged. Jane McClung was named the winner of this event for being the best leader. The girls also performed the virginia reel after which they took a walk.

Tonight is "stunt night" again. The girls will stage different things which might amuse their girl friends. After this is concluded another bathing beauty contest will be held. "Miss East Brook" for this week will be chosen at this time.

A field meet will be held tomorrow morning if the weather permits.

Former Dry Officers Write Experiences

Seems To Be Popular Pastime Of Former Prohibition Officers

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH,
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 22.—"My experiences in enforcing the prohibition law," is becoming one of the popular topics of the day for ex-federal officials.

Included in the list who have or who will give the public the real facts are General Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury, who August 1 becomes a private citizen, Major Walton Green, former chief of the dry "secretary service," and Col. James C. Waddell, ex-head of the alcohol and brewery inspection service.

Green already has written extensively of his experiences as an enforcement official having said referring to the retirement of General Andrews—"after Andrews the deluge."

Andrews, himself, has now retired to a summer home in northern New York, where he is preparing a book and a series of articles relative to the perplexing job of drying up the United States and taking the politics out of prohibition.

Andrews Is Writing

Since Andrews never was a prohibitionist and was charged by the radical prohibitionists as out of sympathy with the Volstead act it has been reported that he may make some sensational statements relative to the future of prohibition.

Waddell has not indicated what viewpoint he will take in the story of the government's effort to close up breweries and to prevent the diversions of industrial alcohol.

His job as alcohol-brewery supervisor has made him familiar with the bootleggers greatest source of supply —the diversions of alcohol between the distillery and the industry for which it is legally intended.

The Brewery Problem

The brewery problem is another of great interest in prohibition enforcement. Hundreds of cereal beverage plants are in operation all over the United States. Thousands of gallons of alcoholic beer—the variety with a pre-war kick—is reaching the markets, especially in the east.

Reports show that many wildcat breweries are in operation throughout the east and that in some cities intoxicating beer may be purchased over the bar.

The situation is presenting a serious problem to newspaper correspondents who watch prohibition developments. On more than one occasion questions have gone unanswered because the official has been tongue tied in a contract with this or that publishing house. His opinions or information cannot be given to the public until he resigns and writes his "experiences."

Draft Capital And Labor For War, Vets' Plan

Universal Conscription Is Plan To Be Presented To Next Congress

Organizations Of World War Cripples Back Of Preparedness Plan

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, July 22—Disabled world war veterans' organizations will demand of Congress the enactment of a universal conscription law to draft capital and labor in the next war just as the nation's man power was called to the colors in 1917, maintenance of an adequate national defense capable of sudden expansion in the next emergency and increased appropriations for civilian military training camps to provide better equipped camps in the future.

This was the declaration of William F. Tate, of Atlanta, Ga., the new national commander of the Disabled American Veterans, who has been in Washington conferring with the federal officials on the legislative program with the disabled veterans will place before Congress next December.

Permanent Medical Service

Aroused by the number of physicians and surgeons who have left or are planning to leave the Veterans' Bureau for other fields the D. A. V. will urge upon Congress the establishment of a permanent medical service in the bureau modeled after the medical corps of the Army and the Navy, believing that professional observation and treatment of the former service men will be improved if doctors will become "career" men in the bureau rather than accepting appointments largely upon a temporary basis.

Due to the number of men threatened with losses of benefits through delay in filing claims and presenting proof the D. A. V. wants all time limit for applications removed and also desires extension for conversion and reinstatement of insurance the records showing that more than two thirds of the men who formerly held government policies have allowed them to lapse.

Congress will again be petitioned by the D. A. V. to end the discrimination against permanently disabled former emergency officers of the Army by granting them the same retirement privileges as have been extended to all other offices of the Army, Navy and Marines.

Ask More Compensation

In the belief that mentally disabled veterans are suffering a hardship by being held to $20 a month compensation, the organization wants this amount raised to $30 and the D. A. V. will ask that the presumption cause in the act governing the Veterans' Bureau be extended to include constitutional and chronic diseases.

There are several other items on the program which the D. A. V. will present to Congress, but on of the points upon which early action is especially expected is the provision for the completion of the permanent hospital construction program at emergency speed. A measure calling for $11,000,000 to provide new hospitals in several sections of the country passed the House at the last session, only to be lost in the closing filibuster in the Senate.

E And A. Division Wins Both Awards

Both Gold And Silver Banners Come To Division For Safety

Erie and Ashtabula division of the Pennsylvania railroad has been awarded both the gold and silver banners for the fine record that they accomplished the past quarter in the safety campaign, according to word received by Raymond Swenk, divisional superintendent of the company.

The gold banner is given to the division having the lowest rate of accidents per million man hours, while the silver banner is awarded to the division making the greatest reduction in accidents during the quarter compared with the same period last year.

All of the 12 divisions of the company have made a fine showing the past three months, with the exception of one division.

The E. & A. division, which has its headquarters located at New Castle, far surpassed the records of all other divisions and these two banners will soon be delivered here as the permanent possession of the local division. Congratulatory letters were received by the superintendent of the division from T. H. Carrow, superintendent of safety of the entire Pennsylvania lines, and from P. L. Grovem, general superintendent on the Pennsylvania railroad.

The local division ran for 75 days without a single reportable accident, and in the three months' period had only four accidents. Compared with last year they made a reduction of 93.6 per cent, which was not touched by any other division.

On account of the fine success of the campaign the safety department has decided to continue the contest for the next quarter and until further notice. Officials say that it is wonderful the great improvement that has been made since these special competitive campaigns have been instituted.

Governor Fisher To See Coolidge At Rapid City

By I. S. NEIMAN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 22.—Governor John S. Fisher is going to visit President Coolidge at Rapid City, in the Black Hills.

Abandoning his plan for a two weeks' fishing trip near Mackinac, Mich., the governor, accompanied by Howard Rigby, his private secretary, and Dr. Francis Patterson of Philadelphia, left here shortly after noon for Detroit, where he will be the guest tomorrow of Mayor John W. Smith.

The governor will go from Detroit to Mackinac, where he will attend the annual conference of governors, and will remain there until Friday.

Then the party of three will strike westward, with Denver, Rapid City, Cheyenne, the Yellowstone and Glacier parks on their itinerary, last minute plans revealed.

A visit with relatives of the governor at Thermopolea, Wyoming, is on the program, but the highlight of the western trip is the slated meeting betweeen the nation's chief executive and Pennsylvania's governor. The governor's party was not sure on what date they would arrive in Rapid City.

W. Boyd Hamilton, the governor's personal secretary, was left behind to take care of routine matters in the executive office here. Indications that the governor plans a real vacation, minus the cares of routine, were confirmed in leaving Hamilton behind for the latter has served as the governor's "release" man, and it is expected that Hamilton will carry on the routine matters as usual, making public last minute acts of the governor here, and generally looking after the governor's office.

Rapid Progress On Street Work

Seven Street Paving Jobs Are Being Rushed Along

Rapid progress is being made by contractors in charge of seven street improvements according to Municipal Engineer F. F. Miller.

The seven thoroughfares are being paved, five with brick and two with concrete.

Brick has been laid in South Mercer, Lutton and a portion of Phillips street. Asphalt has been poured over the brick in Lutton street and may be poured on South Mercer street Friday. As soon as Phillips street is completed the brick will be rolled and asphalt poured.

Concrete has been poured in Delaware avenue north to Sumner, and only three more blocks of concrete foundation, or north to Hillcrest remain. The brick laying has not yet started.

The grading of North Mercer street is underway and the steam shovel is digging between Lincoln and Wallace avenues.

The former improvements are being made by the Olsen company.

Concrete is being poured on the east side of Lathrop street and as soon as that side is finished concrete will be poured on the east side of William street to Long avenue. The contractors, Woods and Golder will then pour concrete on the west side of both thoroughfares.

New Hatreds In Illinois Bring Mad Campaign

Bitter Enemies To Fight It Out At Polls For State Offices

Gov. Small, In Battle For Vindication, To Make His Most Stirring Battle

By LOUIS J. HUMPHREY
International News Service Staff Correspondent

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 22.—Illinois politicians are girding themselves for a clash of unprecedented bitterness at the next election.

New hatreds and alignments have risen in the "Sucker State," threatening overthrow of existing combines and even the political life of some prominent in shaping the state's destinies.

The fight for the governorship promises to be marked by extreme bitterness.

Gov. Len Small, whose administration ruled the late session of the legislature with a firm hand, is expected be a candidate for re-election. If he is, he will exert himself to the utmost to win, as he is smarting under recent payment to the state of $650,000, which counsel for the state alleges was due for unpaid interest on state funds during Small's term as state treasurer. The governor himself claims the payment unjust and that he was forced to settle for interest which certain banks received on state funds.

Three Down-Staters.

As an already self-announced enemy for gubernatorial honors, he must face Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom, under whose command the state's counsel agreed to the out-of-court settlement between Small and the state over the alleged unpaid interest.

A third strong entry for the post probably will be Secrectary of State L. L. Emmerson, undoubtedly a candidate and a political enemy of the governor for years. Emmerson is perhaps able to poll the largest personal following in Illinois.

All three of these downstaters, to whose number may be added John Oglesby, son of Illinois' Civil War governor, Richard Oglesby.

And Chicago, smarting under what she believes unjust treatment by the last legislature, may hold the deciding cards.

Whether she will back one of the downstaters with all the power of the Thompson-Lundin, Deneen-Crow factions or whether the factions will split, is a matter of conjecture.

A possibility exists that the Chicagoans may unite, forget their differences, and nominate their own candidate, thus precipitating a broader rent in the political structure of the state.

Practically all of the candidates are pledged to continuance of Illinois' hard road building program, which under Governor Small has grown into perhaps the best in the union.

May Sling Mud

Whether Small and Carlstrom will engage in a "mud-slinging" battle is a matter being disputed. If so, onlookers will see a campaign even more aciduous than that now contemplated.

Small recently severed all connections with the Emmerson faction by slicing large amounts from the biennial appropriation to his office as secretary of state. "A brazen abuse of executive power." Emmerson branded the move, while Small explained it was "to avoid duplication of work done by hard road policemen of the governor's and secretary's offices.

The first skirmishes are expected during the political roundups which will be staged here in August during the state fair. With the three leading entries hopelessly at sword's points onlookers expect Illinois to witness perhaps her bitterest campaign.

Whatever alignments result before the race take definite form will be carried on down the line into other offices, including the secretary of state, clerk of the supreme court and so on.

Says Coal Being Used Faster Than It's Being Mined

Ivor Davis Declares Million More Tons Used Weekly Than Mined

That eight millions of tons of coal is being mined each week by the non-union soft coal miners and that nine millions of tons are being used, was the statement made today by Ivor V. Davis.

The large manufacturers, instead of buying coal on the open market, are now using up their surplus coal, because of the fact that beginning August 20 the freight rates to the lakes will be lowered 20 cents on the ton. This is keeping the big buyers off the market and they will buy most of their coal after that date, says Mr. Davis.

Surplus over the ordinary amount of coal in storage is 20,000,000 tons, which is being used up at a rate of 2,000,000 tons a week, and at the present rate of consumption, this surplus will last until September 1.

Many of the consumers think that the strike is ended because of the little publicity which it gets.

Receive Fish To Stock Shenango

Fifteen Cans Of Black Bass Are Received At Mercer; Other News

(Special To The News)

MERCER, Pa., July 22—Fifteen cans of black bass containing many thousand of "fingerling" length of fish of this specie arrived in Mercer today consigned to the officials of the Mercer Rod and Gun club.

The shipment is from the state hatcheries and will be used for stocking of the Shenango river says R. C. Neuroh the club secretary. A car load shipment of black bass from the federal hatcheries on the Southern Mississippi are expected to arrive here some time this month or the fore part of August.

They will be also consigned to the officers of the Mercer club. The fish in this shipment will be used for the re-stocking of the river and creeks of the locality and Sandy Lake at Stoneboro.

The moving of the drilling rig of W. N. Hovis to the farm of County Commissioner F. P. Minner in East Lackawannock is the first step toward the testing of the land in that township for its gas and oil production by a company of Mercer men.

The initial well on the Minner farm will be followed by the drilling of a number of others. It is said that the history of the township's oil and gas activities would indicate that it is underlaid with sufficient of these natural resources to warrant the present operations.

The concreting of the Mercer-Sharon road from the Wallace hill to Charlestown should be completed today.

The road may be put in use 15 days after application of the concrete top to the base of the old macadam road.

Once the road is open to Charlestown driving to Sharon from here will be a comparatively easy journey to the present trip.

The contract includes this road to Hermitage. The highway is under contract to be completed by September.

Viewers for the survey of grading improvements on High avenue and Sherman avenue in the city of Sharon were petitioned by City Solicitor F. A. Fruit and granted by Judge J. A. McLaughry in the appointment of C P. Clarke of Greenville, J. W. Nelson of Mercer and Harry Hunter of Leesburg.

Their appointment is effective at once the court order reads. The petition filed sets forth that the grading on High avenue was authorized on November 2, 1926 by the council of Sharon and was located on the block of this avenue between Filer way and Emmanuel place. The Sherman avenue improvement was authorized November 30 and lies between Idaho street and Union street.

Highway Commissioner Stuart is not in his office this week is the word received from Harirsburg on inquiry of the county commissioners of this county who with E. B. Harshaw of Grove City and F. A. Fruit of Sharon constitute a committee of five that will place before that official Mercer county's proposed $2,000,000 road building program of hard surface roads totaling 52 miles.

The committee will not go to Harrisburg until they may see Mr. Stuart in person it is stated today.

The 50-hour working week will remain in force in shoe factories in Lynn, Mass., as a result of the decision of the state board of arbitration, just made public, denying the request of the shoe workers for a five-day week.

British Ambassador's Summer "Spoiled" By Arms' Conference

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to New Castle News.

WASHINGTON, July 22. — His entire summer's being spoiled for Sir Esme Howard, British ambassador here, by the everlasting naval limitations argument at Geneva, between the American negotiators and his own government's.

No diplomat likes to be tied by the leg during the dog days to as hot a capital as Washington gets to be at this season, but that's exactly Sir Esme's fix.

There's little for him to do. He has no voice in what's taking place at Geneva.

Yet he has to be here and look pleasant, to show that there isn't a bit of ill feeling on his part, even if his countryman have been trying to put across on the United States rather more than they seem likely to succeed in getting away with.

As Washington interprets it, the British at Geneva say, in effect:

"Britain, long mistress of the seas, means to continue being their mistress, but she's willing to limit the size of her fleet, on condition that America hold down to one a trifle smaller."

"Oh, no," rejoin the Americans. "We propose a 50-50 basis."

"Impossible," insist the British.

"It's our best offer," answer the American representatives — meaning that they know it's the best offer the senate will ratify, anyway.

* * *

Thus they're deadlocked.

To say that anybody's angry, doubtless would be to exaggerate. Nevertheless, each side evidently feels that the other's unreasonable.

There's a certain mutual soreness.

Sir Esme's business is to massage this soreness out of the United States if he can.

He'd already left on his vacation when the Geneva jam began to develop. Hurrying back to Washington from the seaside, he's been on the job ever since, in a spell of weather fit to grill the eyeballs out of a salamander, let alone an apoplectic Englishman in a high hat, cutaways, pearl gray pants, boiled shirt, spats and all the accessories.

* * *

Nearly all the rest of the diplomatic corps's scattered hither and yon, on the golf links or tennis courts or in nice cool swimming pools.

A third assistant secretary is about the most important functionary you can find at any embassy or legation in Washington—except Britain's.

As for the bunch at Geneva, who are responsible for the whole difficulty—why, they're assembled at one of the loveliest summer resorts in Europe and probably don't care if the tie-up hangs on until snow flies.

In the meantime Sir Esme sticks here in Washington and sizzles.

* * *

Washington, by the way, has an idea that the balkiness—as it's regarded here—of the British representatives at Geneva isn't going to "take" very well with the home taxpayers.

You hear the prediction made that the upshot will be a national election in England before so many months are past, and a more accommodating London administration to deal with as a result of it, but guessing on transatlantic politics is a pretty long range proposition.

Sir Esme Howard, at all events, appears to have been whip-sawed out of his mid-summer "holiday," as the English call it, so far as this year's concerned, whatever may be the final fate of the Stanley Baldwin government, across the water.

The eight-hour day law in British Columbia now applies to practically every industry in the province except agriculture and fishing, which are exempt because of their seasonal requirements.

Stadium Presents Lonesome Appearance

But It Will Not Be Long Until Lively Scenes Are Re-enacted

In less than three months the stadium at the Benjamin Franklin junior high school will be echoing with the cheers of thousands of people; one side cheering a New Castle pigskin carrier on to victory with the other side crying in that "never say die" spirit, or perhaps vica versa. Nevertheless there will be noise and plenty of it.

What a striking contrast the stadium of today and the stadium of three months hence make. Today, the field at the stadium is smothered with green grass while the stadium is soaked in dust and dirt. The stadium has a ten months rest during every year.

In the summer time the stadium has a lonesome appearance to it. Why shouldn't it? When it stops to consider that every football season it lets approximately 65,000 fans romp and cheer over its back, no wonder it has this appearance in the summer time.

The stadium doors are kept closed from the time the football season is over in the fall until the next fall with the exception of the times when repairmen enter and other similar instances.

It will not be long now until the doors are opened for more teams to do battle, and everyone is anxious for this time to come. The season usually opens the latter part of September and continues until Thanksgiving day. During this time the stadium is full of activity and the lonesome look is lost amid the excitement.

We hope the stadium "won't feel hurt" when the crowds begin to clatter on its concrete structure next September, unawares of how it feels.

Japan Politics Change As New Party Thrives

Two Old Parties Give Up Ghost As 226 Seats In Diet Go To Hamaguchi

"Lloyd George" Of Movement Has Long Been Power In Government

(International News Service)

TOKIO July 22.—Politics in Japan like those of any other country, always will be complicated but some of the kinks have been pulled out of the Japanese situation by the organization of Rikken Minseito, a new political party.

The birth of Rikken Minseito witnessed the death of two other parties, and that is the chief reason why politics of Japan thereby have been slightly simplified. Kenseikai, the party headed by Reijiro Wakatsuki, the former premier and Seiyu Honton, a minority group which held the balance of power in the old days when Kenseikai and Seiyukai were the chief contending parties, merged to form Rikken Minseito. Kenseikai and Seiyu Honton, names long familiar in Japanese politics, therefore disappear.

Rikken Minseito is a lusty infant at birth for it sprang into the political arena immediately as the majority party of the Diet. By combining the Kenseikai and Seiyu Honton memberships, Rikken Minseito has 226 seats in the House of Representatives as against 177 for Seiyukai, the party now in power.

Japanese "Lloyd George"

Heading the new party is Yako Hamaguchi, known as the "Lloyd George" of Japan, his likeness to the little Welshman consisting of a slight physical resemblance and a more marked resemblance in the matter of political astuteness. Hamaguchi long has been a power in Japanese politics and one of the bulwarks of the old Kenseikai. He held the post of finance minister in the cabinet of the late Count Kato, and in the Kakatsuki cabinet he was home minister, which corresponds to th vice-presidency in the Japanese system.

Hagamuchi's chief lieutenants will be Wakatsuki, former premier and president of Kenseikai; T. Tokonami, former president of Seivu Honton, and Baron Tatsuo Yamamoto, former advisor to Seiyu Honton. These three constitute the board of advisers.

Rikken Minseito means the Constiutional Democratic Party. Five planks comprise its platform. They are:

1—By the accurate reflection of the popular mind in the lower affairs and distribution should be equalized, with a view to removal of the causes of social unrest.

3—International justice, as the guiding principle in the conduct of international relations, should be asserted and the principles of the open door and racial equality should be strongly upheld.

Practical Education

4—The practical side of national education should be stressed and the fullest play should be given to the individuality of the student.

5—Every institution, either legislative or administrative, which has grown obsolete, should be abolished and the machinery of government should be adjusted in the light of changed conditions.

It is on this platform that Rikken Minseito hopes to ride into office, displacing the Seiyukai ministry headed by Premier Giichi Tanaka. Since Rikken Minseito holds a majority of the seats in the Diet it is not unlikely that it will be able to maneuver the situation so that it may come into power during the next session of the Diet if not before. Platform principles doubtless will have little to do with it but the astute political tactics of Hamaguchi and his advisors will.

Auto Caravans Off To Visit Coolidge

(International News Service)

RAPID CITY S. D. July 22.—The pilgrimage to the Black Hills has started. Assuming that President Coolidge is a candidate to succeed himself it may be said that a front porch campaign for the middle west is about to be inaugurated. Caravans from all over the middle west are heading in this direction.

The latest announcement of a caravan of automobiles coming to the Black Hills to see President Coolidge came from Des Moines the home state of Representatives Haugen and Dickinson. The telegram announces that a caravan of several hundred will arrive here by the end of the month.

Another caravan is coming from Winnipeg showing that even if the Manitobans do not vote they are anxious to pay their respects to the president of the United States.

Reports coming here indicate that a similar caravan is being arranged in Minnesota. In addition to the automobile caravans which are heading this way from the various states individuals are beginning to make reservations. The local hotels are being filled to overflowing and anyone planning to come here would do well to make reservations far in advance.

Edwards Heirs Fight For $8,000,000,000

(International News Service)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 22—Pursuit of the $8,000,000,000 estate to have been left by Captain Robert Edwards, a ship captain of colonial days, will be resumed here soon by the Heart of America Society of Edward Heirs, an organization of Kansas Cityans claiming direct descent from the seafarer.

Efforts to gain the estate by associations of heirs in all parts of the United States, has been in progress many years. In Kansas City, it is given fresh impetus annually by a convention of the members.

The Heirs of whom it is reported their are more than 5,000 in the United States, claim the ownership of 160 acres on Manhattan Island, on which much of New York's financial district now is located.

The land, they say, was given to Captain Edwards by King George III and was leased by his son for 99 years, but did not revert to the heirs at the expiration of the lease.

Only a tablespoon of vinegar in your sauce perhaps, but how important that tablespoonful. Let it be all flavor and not mere sourness.

The good flavor of the Heinz Vinegar you use comes from months and months of aging in wood—a slow, patient, mellowing process that brings out the bouquet and perfects the flavor and aroma.

When you use Heinz Pure Vinegar you are getting all flavor. Every drop of it is an added delight to any sauce or dressing.

No Appeals From North Atlanta Suburban Court

Unique Court Is Established In Southern City

(International News Service)

ATLANTA, July 22.—North Atlanta, a suburb, has a court of law probably the only one of its kind in the United States. It is called the "Court of Conciliation," and its success may be seen in the fact thart no case once taken before it has ever been appealed to a higher court.

No lawyer is permitted to plead for a client in the court of conciliation, because they "frequently clutter up the wheels of justice." Dr. A. S. Libby, mayor of North Atlanta and dean of the school of Commerce and Banking at Oglethorpe University is founder of this court and he is the sole magistrate.

The litigants are permitted to talk over the disputes with Dr. Libby, who then decides and hands down his opinion, which so far as North Atlanta is concerned is final. A number of property disputes and matrimonial difficulties have been straightened out, it was said. Court is held in one of the classrooms of Oglethorpe or when the school is closed, in the parlor of Dr. Libby's home in North Atlanta.

"In our court," said Dr. Libby "the procedure is informal. There is no limit as to the amount involved; a case of any size is accepted, provided either side cannot employ counsel or use the regular courts. A lawyer may plead his own case but otherwise lawyers are barred. With that exception it is just like any other court. Cases are decided according to the substantive law and not according to arbitrary opinions of right and wrong."

FIREMAN FAILS TO PASS EXAMS; ENDS HIS LIFE

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, July 22.—After he had failed to pass an examination to become a locomotive engineer Walter Grove, 32, railroad fireman, killed himself with a revolver in his home at Glassport Thursday. He fired one bullet into his head.

CITIZENS SECEDE.

BALTIMORE, July 22.—Baltimore city officials engaged in a war on the pigeons that make their home around the city hall have more than the birds to contend with. After a trap had been erected to snare the birds the citizenry protested and toted baskets of grain and bread crumbs to the scene. Followed a feast such as the pigeons had never before dreamed of. And now, well fed they won't approach the food-laden trap.

Texas Pageant To Celebrate La Salle Visit

First White Colony In State To Honor Founder This Year

Chief Feature Of Fete To Be Historical Review Of Early Events

(International News Service)

BAYSIDE BEACH, Tex., July 22.—Texas' first annual historical pageant and festival commemorating the early exploits in this state of Robert La Salle, early French explorer, will be held this fall on the site of the first white colony established in Texas by the intrepid Frenchman in 1684.

The chief feature of the fete is to be an industrial review, similar to San Francisco's Portola parades, in which the landing of the daring navigator and his little group of brave colonists will be depicted.

Other phases in the march of Texas history, particularly in its relation to the Matagorda Bay region, will be portrayed in the proper continuity; including the rise and fall of old Indianola, vanished port of Matagorda, where once flourished a thriving commerce with New Orleans, and with the pioneer Texas towns that sprung up about the early Spanish missions of the southwest.

Review Early Days

The pageant also will review the ox-cart freighting between Indianola and San Antonio, in the early part of the eighteenth century; skirmishes with the Indians and the Mexicans; the dawn of the cattle-raising era, during which early sailing vessels and the first steamboats were laden with beef for distant land, the agricultural era, witnessing the ascendancy of King Cotton, and finally the rebirth of the Texas gulf coast as a new play-ground and resort section, with modern boardwalks, bathing beauty parades, the fashionable casino and the invasion of the pleasure-hunting horde.

Rich in history and tradition, the west coast of Matagorda Bay provides a wealth of subject matter for the pageant. Besides tthe ruins of La Salle's early colony, a year after the founding of which he was slain by a jealous follower, there remains here the ruins of the first Lutheran church established in Texas and the foundations of the first military fort established in the southwest by the United States government.

Historic Parade

Across this ground, also, trekked the early German colonists whose descendants compose the greater part of the population of a dozen south Texas communities. Improperly financed these immigrants landed at old Indianola and resolutely set out afoot to find the land of promise. Some perished, but others established great landed estates from which posterity has reaped a rich legacy.

A touch of romance will be supplied by the appearance in the historical procession of Jean La Fitte, early buccaneer who harassed the commerce of gulf waters in the days when Spanish galleons plied their courses to New Orleans, Galveston and Indianola.

Routed from his stronghold on Galveston island by the U. S. Navy, the picturesque La Fitte, and his numerous crew of fugitives from justice, swarmed into the peaceful Matagorda Bay and here established a new haven of refuge.

The usual crop of tales of buried treasure has sprung up around the La Fitte tradition but thus far no chests of gold or jewels have been unearthed. But this phase supplies an enchanting flavor to the pageant and will not be neglected.

N. Y. Sets Record For New Highways

(International News Service)

ALBANY, N. Y., July 22.—New York state is setting a record this year for the construction of new highways.

Since the road-building season opened in the spring, approximately 163 miles of new roads have been built, according to Captain Arthur W. Brandt, state commissioner of highways. This represents 37 miles more of roads than were built in the same period last year.

There were 211 contracts under way throughout the state. Road contractors are employing 9,414 men, while the state has a maintenance force of 6,229.

During the last week of June, 317,302 square yards of pavement was completed, the greatest amount laid in any one week in the last five years.

The state has 10,000 miles of good roads.

More Millions Of Alien Property Is Given To Owners

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Property valued at $3,599,226.75 and cash to the amount of $7,640,559.67, a total of $11,239,786.43, was released to alien owners by the Alien Property Custodian during the six months from January 1 to June 30, 1927, according to figures made public by Custodian Sutherland today.

The cash return represents $3,099,033.83 of war seized principal, while $4,541,525.84 is interest and income on cash and property held in trust by the Custodian.

A total of 1344 alien owners shared in the distribution of $3,599,226.76 of property and $3,099,033.83 cash principal, the two items representing a total of $6,698,260.59. This was an average of $4,983.82 per claimant. However, $841,037.40 returned by court decrees was distributed among only nine owners, an average of $93,449.71. This was divided $262,092.90 cash and $578,944.50 property.

In the distribution of $2,910,468.57 released under order of the Attorney General there were 91 claimants, this distribution averaging $31,983.17 per claimant. This was apportioned $1,568,026.54 cash and $1,342,422.03 property. The Attorney General must pass on all claims where the total value of the sequestered property exceeds $10,000.

The remaining $2,946,754.62 of returned principal was distributed among 1,244 claimants, an average of $2,368.77 per claimant. Of this $1,268,914.39 was cash and $1,677,840.23 property.

Farmers Fighting New Crop Pest In Corn Section

(International News Service)

AMES, Iowa, July 22—While the European corn borer has not been officially reported in Iowa, the officials of Iowa State College here have a similar crop pest to combat this season in the common stalk borer, which is proving unusually destructive to growing corn.

Not satisfied with their usual weed diet, the stalk borers are attacking corn all over the state in large numbers this year, according to the state entomologist's section of the Iowa department of agriculture, located here.

Stalk borers usually feed on ragweed and several other kinds of weeds in pastures and along the fence rows, moving into the borders of corn fields when the weeds become tough. This year the weeds have become unpalatable earlier than usual, says Carl J. Drake, state entomologist, and the caterpillars show a decided preference for tender corn stalks.

"There has been a constant increase in these larvae for the last ten years, with a rapid increase the last four years," Drake explained. "Perhaps we are getting more reports of it because everyone is looking for the European corn borer, but the fact remains that the stalk borer is attacking the corn in greater numbers than ever before and it, too, must be intelligently combatted."

Federal Agents Seek Jakie Klein

Klein Is Charged With Tampering With A Government Witness

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, July 22.—With Mayor Charles H. Kline's definite promise to give the Citizen's League of Pittsburgh an answer Saturday as to whether he will oust Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh, interest here centered today on an announcement that federal agents are seeking Jakie Klein in connection with the disappearance of William H. King, league director several weeks ago.

Klein was charged with tampering with a government witness.

When King disappeared, he was wanted as a witness in a case before a United States commissioner, charged with violations of the federal prohibition laws.

Both Klein and King have admitted King received $300 to leave this city hurriedly. Klein charged he had paid King a total of $22,500 to do the disappearing act. This King later denied.

Klein today was reported as returning from the Dempsey-Sharkey fight in New York. The warrant was issued Wednesday, it was learned.

Sutter's Fort Is Official Museum Of '49 Gold Rush

(International News Service)

SACRAMENTO, July 22.—A movement to make Sutter's Fort, where James Marshall found gold in California in 1848, the greatest historical museum in California was under way today. The state board of control has made the fort an official museum for keeping relics of the great '49 gold rush.

Historians tracing the pioneer trails have discovered souvenirs of the "days of '49." These relics, it was believed, will be deposited in the Sutter museum.

Sutter's Fort, built by John Sutter, a Swiss immigrant, was the center of a flourishing colony before the United States took over the government of California. Sutter's immense land holdings and great fortune were wiped out in the turbulent days of the gold rush.

North Street Man Slightly Improved

L. P. Smith of 310 East North street, who was recently seriously injured in a fall at Youngstown while doing some painting, and who was brought a few days ago to the New Castle hospital, is reported as showing a tendency for improvement in spite of the fact that his injuries are of a very serious nature.

He sustained a fracture of the vertebra and also other injuries, which will probably keep him in the hospital for a long time.

Simple Remedy For Bad Stomach Gives Swift Relief

No Need of Strong Medicines or Diet. Safe and Simple Home Recipe Keeps Stomach in Fine Condition.

If you are a victim of Stomach Troubles—Gas, Sourness, Pain or Bloating—you may have quick and certain relief by following this simple advice.

Don't take strong medicines, artificial digestants or pull down your system with starvation diets. For within reason most folks may eat what they like—if they will keep their stomach free from souring acids that hinder or paralyze the work of digestion.

And the best and easiest way to do this is to follow every meal with three or four tablets of Bisurated Magnesia—a pleasant, harmless, inexpensive, and handy tablet form of Magnesia that promptly neutralizes acidity and keeps your stomach sweet and clean.

A week's trial of Bisurated Magnesia tablets, which any good druggist can supply at trifling cost, should quickly convince you that 90 per cent of ordinary stomach distress is absolutely unnecessary. Be sure to get Bisurated Magnesia Tablets!

Canterbury Tales Translation May Be Cleared Up

(International News Service)

CHICAGO, July 22.—The age-old literary mystery as to what Geoffrey Chaucer was trying to say in his Canterbury Tales around which debate has centered for the past five centuries seems to be on the verge of solution.

An imposing collection of original manuscripts has been assembled here at the University of Chicago by Professor J. M. Manley, head of the English department, who is devoting his life to making a new translation of Chaucer, the first English poet, into modern English, which virtually is a different language.

From all over the world original manuscripts or photostatic copies have been gathered by Professor Manley in his attempt to unravel the problem and today the collection includes 83 documents in Geoffrey's own handwriting.

The collection of known documents, however, remains incomplete owing to the refusal of a New York bookseller to part with five fragments of original manuscript for less than $92,000.

Federal Dry Unit Pays Own Upkeep

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, July 22.—At least one federal prohibition is approaching self-support. It is the Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia region, presided over by John D. Pennington, erstwhile naval officer.

It is estimated that in the year Pennington has been treating hard-boiled bootleggers to naval discipline, his unit of the federal enforcement system has netted $1,432,000 from confiscated material used to manufacture liquor.

In June it cost the government about $45,000 to operate this unit, and some months that figure is exceeded, so the unit cannot be said to be making a profit, except on paper, at present. Much of the $1,432,000 remains to be collected, but Pennington is confident it will reach the government coffers.

Aside from the confiscating their materials and means of transportation, Pennington made a flank attack upon bootleggers requiring them to pay taxes on their illicit trade just as though it were legitimate.

In this manner the administrator, figures that bootleggers in this district have been assessed $550,000 in taxes alone. Of this they have paid $46,200 cash.

NOTHING BUT EXERCISE.

NEW YORK July 22.—For once New York city has failed to provide an official welcome. After running the 260 miles of hard, hot roads from Boston to the metropolis, William Busch, carrying a sign on his back, "The Spirit of Charlestown" arrived in Times Square. Not an official was there to greet him. Even his own backers forgot to be on hand and the runner was forced to apply to the newspapers for clothing. Busch made the trip in 58 hours and expected to find a delegation waiting to receive him.

UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW CASTLE

Charles H. Young Is Already Sworn In As Commission Member

Charles H. Young of New Castle, who was appointed a member of the state public service commission yesterday by Governor John S. Fisher to fill the vacancy left by the death of John L. Stewart, was sworn into his new office while in Harrisburg yesterday.

Mr. Young having become a member of this commission, resigned his position as legal advisor to the Workmen's Compensation Bureau, which place he has held since the bureau went into effect 11 1-2 years ago.

Mr. Young's appointment to the public service commission is to complete the unexpired term of Mr. Stewart, which amounts to about four years.

The work of the public service commission is one of the most important and will take almost the full time that Mr. Young has to offer the public. Except during the summer vacation, the commission, consisting of seven members, meets the first of each week in executive session in Harrisburg, and then during the remainder of the week hearings are held in different parts of the state, different members being assigned to different hearings and the report of these hearings are submitted to the executive meeting the following week.

Although the work of the commission will take Mr. Young away from New Castle a good part of the time, he states that he will continue his residence in this city and that he will continue to act on the board of education, although it may be somewhat inconvenient to attend some of the meetings of the board.

The public service commission, which was formed some years ago, has many activities, as they must act on actions concerning the general public with all corporations and organizations that render service to the public, such as railroads, street car lines, interurban electric lines, electric light and power companies, telephones and telegraphs, bus lines, fixing of grade crossings, etc.

The members of the present commission are William D. B. Ainey, chairman, of Montrose; John W. Brown of Lancaster, James S. Benn of Philadelphia, Samuel Walker of Butler, S. Ray Schelby of Uniontown, Everson Collins of Williamsport and Charles H. Young of New Castle.

Few Reflections Of Life In New York

By J. J. MEDDOFF
International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, July 22. — Jimmy Murphy's friends have paraphrased the old adage of "The Luck of the Irish" to "The Pluck of the Irish" because Jimmy, only fourteen years old and a victim of infantile paralysis probably saved the life of a young negro boy, Jim Blunt.

Brought to the hospital where Jimmy Murphy was confined, the negro boy underwent a presumably minor operation which turned out serious and the Irish lad was informed that the negro boy was too weak from loss of blood to survive unless a transfusion was immediately made.

Did Jimmy Murphy rise to the occasion? Grandly so, with the simple assertion that "the Irish always help other folks."

And now Jim Blunt, recovering rapidly, grins merrily and tells the listening world that "Heah's one niggah what's got Irish blood in him."

Edward Decker, 41, sent his wife and four-year-old son to New York to visit Mrs. Decker's mother, promising to meet them there several days later. But Mrs. Decker found her mother had moved and left no address.

Mr. Decker arrived per schedule and learned the same thing, but Mrs. Decker, in her disappointment, had failed to leave word where her husband could locate her.

Followed a three-months search until Decker told his story to the newspapers which promptly published it and next day there was a happy reunion.

"Four out of five" would apply almost to the Army.

More than half the soldiers who receive honorable discharges return to it, according to figures officially announced by Major C. A. Pivirotte, in charge of recruiting service here.

Of 83,019 regulars discharged in the past three years, 48,125, or more than 57 per cent, "joined up" again right away or within three months. The figures included every Army post in the United States and all foreign possessions.

Sixteen persons in the last twelve months were given life sentences in prison under the Baumes law which makes such a penalty mandatory upon a person convicted for a fourth time on a felony charge.

In some cases where the life sentence was imposed on the habitual criminals, the punishment according to District Attorney J. H. Banton, seemed to many interested persons to have been too severe, in others, the crimes and records of the men made it appear the life sentence was justified.

Banton himself would offer no opinion on the Baumes law and its effects, dismissing such a request with the statement that he has assumed the attitude that it would take at least two years to obtain the data necessary to reach a fair conclusion.

BURIED GOLD AND PIRATE TALES BRING TREASURE HUNT IN TEXAS

(International News Service)

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas, July 22.—Tales of bruied treasure and black pirating have been renewed here with several treasure hunts underway and more planned as the result of the finding of a large number of old Spanish and British coins by George C. Martin, who has been conducting excavations on Live Oak peninsula and St. Joseph's Island, south of here.

Martin, who has long believed that buried gold lies hidden beneath the shifting sand dunes of the island chain that marks the gulf of Mexico at this point, was digging near the water front when he encountered the coins. After the first was found, about a foot below the surface of the sand, others were uncovered in the sand at various places over an area of a half mile. The coins all date back to the 16th century.

Martin, who is in possession of a purported treasure map, has conducted his search for several weeks following both the map and the legendary stories that have been handed down in south Texas from the time of ancient pirates, who are supposed to have made their bay their port and to have hidden their loot along the coast. He has gathered a collection of approximately 100 coins.

The coins are of silver and gold, mostly Spanish, and are beaten out of the pure metal, without alloy. One of the coins, dated in 1572, is beaten of pure silver and bears the coat of arms of the ancient Spanish kingdom, and is said by collectors to be duplicated by only two known originals. It is irregular in shape, and the quaint designs show the marks of its long stay in the water soaked sand.

Several searching parties have been organized and are systematically digging at points thought to have been used as treasure caches by the black pirates, whose stories are still legends in this picturesque section.

Four Year Campaign Is Being Started By Photographers

The $2,000,000 four-year national advertising campaign of the photographers of the United States and Canada, largest association advertising campaign being carried on in America, makes its opening smash this week, according to information just received from national campaign headquarters at Indianapolis, Ind., by Mr. Seavey of the Seavey studio. Mr. Seavey is a contributor to the fund and is taking an important part in the movement.

Various media are being used for the campaign, Mr. Seavey stated. The national advertising committee urges photographers to use local newspaper space generously. In the national field, nine general magazines and seven publications for business men, having a total circulation close to 20,000,000, are being employed with a total of more than 100 advertisements between now and May, 1928, as the first phase of the four-year drive.

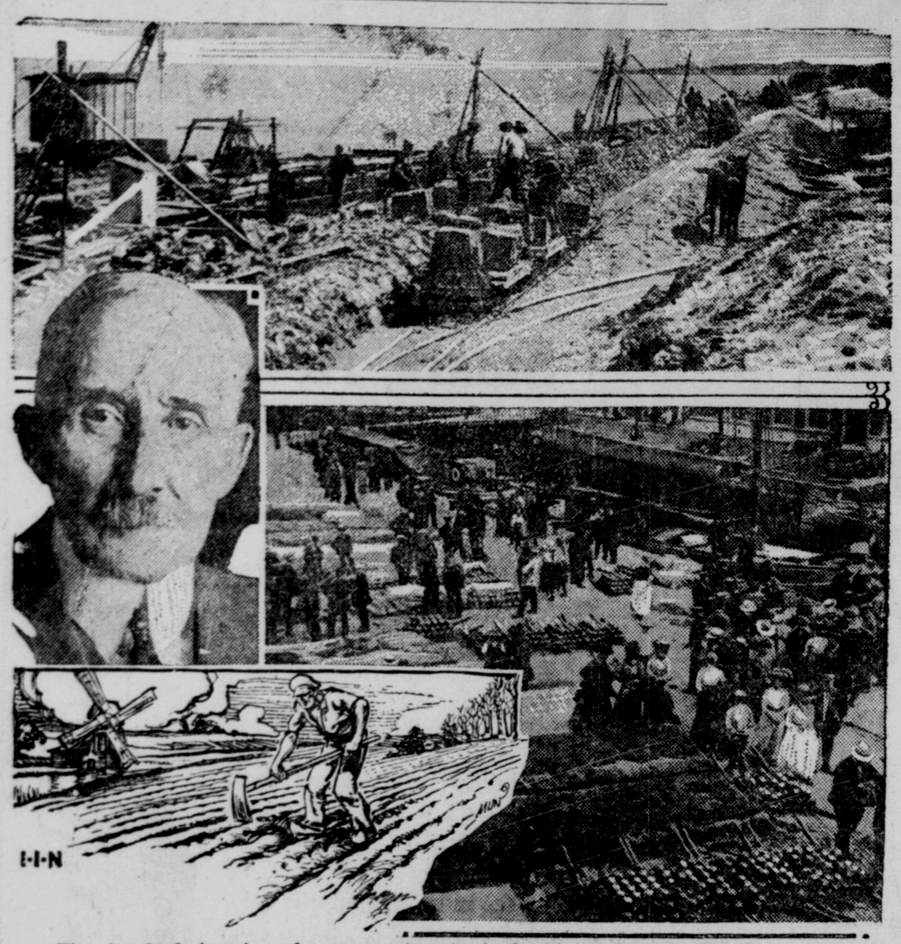
500 Agriculturists Visit Europe, Seeking Benefit Of Thousands Of Years' Experience



Five hundred American farmers, under the leadership of Sam H. Thompson, (above), president of the American Farm Bureau, are to visit Europe this Summer. Pictures show construction work on the great dyke system of Holland, and part of one of the famous cheese markets of Europe, which will be among the things the American farmers will investigate.

(International Illustrated News)

By L. E. EARLY
International Illustrated News Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO,, July 22.—The American considers the domestic agriculturist the best in the world. Haven't America's resources for obtaining fertilizer, modern tractors, the introduction of electric time and labor-saving devices, and the co-operation of the Departments of Agriculture and Commerce made the American farmer the greatest in the world?

In some ways, yes. But the fact remains that the American has much to learn from the European farmer. For example:

In Eastern United States vast acreages lie fallow, uncultivated because a little over 100 years of farming has left the soil unproductive. Yet Europeans are raising fine crops on land that has been tilled for 2,000 years.

The American farmer has come to a realization of this. On July 30 five hundred agriculturists from forty-five States sail on a two months' study of European methods. The party is under the auspices of the American Farm Bureau Federation and the United States Department of Agriculture. Sam H. Thompson, of this city, president of the federation, leads the party, the greatest agricultural investigation expedition in history. It may seem strange to some that while Europe is sending over hundreds of investigators to learn American business methods, America is sending over five hundred investigators to learn European farm methods.

Chief among the things that the Americans will study are:

The great irrigation systems of Denmark and Holland and the successful drainage systems in Holland.

Waste land reclamation in Germany and Denmark, with particular interest in reforestation in those countries and the terracing of slopes along the Rhine.

The highly successful co-operative marketing plans in vogue in many of the European countries.

Slaughtering, egg packing and meat packing in Denmark.

Landscape gardening in France and England.

Economic movements under way to better the condition of the farmer and his employe.

Chief among the things that the Americans will study are:

The cheese industry of Holland.

The famous breeding establishments of Europe, including those of the Island of Jersey.

The great co-operative seed exchange of Roskilde, Germany.

The large farms near Stettin, Germany, built on reclaimed moor land.

Half a million dollars will be spent in making the trip, not counting money spent for recreational purposes. Each of the 500 farmers is paying $385 as his share. The European end of the trip is being arranged by George C. Haas and Edward A. Foley, European representatives of the Department of Agriculture.

The route is over 9,450 miles and is through seven countries and forty-three cities. The party is to sail for home, via Montreal, on September 17.

The permanent court of international justice, now in session at The Hague, consists of 11 regular judges and four deputy judges, each of a different nationality.

Missionary Funds Fall Off Heavily; Work Handicapped

(International News Service)

LONDON, July 22—So serious is the financial position of several of the old English and foreign missionary societies that it is stated that several of them may have to close down.

The London Missionary society, one of the oldest and largest, has an accumulated deficit for the last two years of $205,000 and the board have decided that unless an immediate increase of $125,000 in income can be obtained this year the society will be compelled to close down.

Other societies involved are the Baptist Missionary society which closes the year with a deficit of $175,000; the Church Missionary society whose deficit last year was $62,000; the Church of Scotland with an accumulated deficit of $135,000, and four other societies with a combined deficit of $170,000.

Many Attend Picnic Of First Baptist School At Lakewood

The event is considered as one of the most successful ever given by the school.

Girl Is Fatally Hurt When Thrown Thru Windshield

WESTCHESTER, Pa., July 22.—Thrown through the windshield of a motor car driven by Mrs. Julia Stanbridge, Dorothy Speakman, the 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Speakman of Brandywine Summit, died in the Westchester hospital from loss of blood yesterday. Her jugular vein was cut.

Mrs. Stanbridge suffered lacerations and a probable broken leg.

The accident occurred when a car driven by William Ayers, Wilmington, tried to pass the Stanbridge car. The wheels of the two cars touched, and the Stanbridge car ran against a pole.

Boss Telling Jokes In Office Slows Up Stenographer's Work

(International News Service)

HAMILTON, N. Y., July 22.—The boss telling jokes and talking within earshot of the office stenographer, slows her up so that she doesn't get half her work done, according to Dr. Donald A. Laird, director of the psychological laboratory at Colgate university here.

Stenographers are feminine, even if they are stenographers, and are prone to listen, even though unwillingly and this prevents them from doing efficient work, says Dr. Laird, who has been doing considerable work in experimenting on the effect of noise about the office.

His views were recently expressed before the National Association of Office Managers. Dr. Laird says this:

"Don't tell jokes or hold interesting conversations in the office. The noise decreases the stenographer's efficiency. Offices should be located high enough to avoid the sound of auto sirens reaching the billing clerk's ears. These sounds reduce his efficiency.

"When quiet reigns in an office all the workers can do at least five per cent more work than when it is noisy, we found," Dr. Laird said. "Noise in an office makes an individual burn energy at a rate as high as 25 per cent greater than under quiet conditions.

"Noise is no great respector of sexes. Women suffer from it equally with the men. We were surprised at that. The sound of interesting conversation, we found, cuts into a working individual's output. If you must tell stories, tell them outside the office.

"Auto siren noises are the worst detractions in an office. Unusual noises not anticipated, come next, while the intense hum of a group of office workers is very detrimental.

"The bigger skill a person has, the more detrimental effect noise has upon him.

"Noise increases the tension of all muscles of the body, and it is this increased tension which causes fatigue so quickly. We are in an age of increasing noise, for every year machines are made which add to the total of noise."

Dr. Laird's conclusion is as interesting as it is unique.

"To escape this onslaught which the human ear, accustomed to quiet for thousands of centuries, is unable to cope with, we should turn the future years into an age of noise absorption. That is one of the solutions—absorption by wall covering. We must strike to kill noise."

State Cars No Longer Brown

Now Designated By Marking As "Official" In Pennsylvania

NEWS NOTES OF STATE CAPITAL

By WILLIAM B. BROWN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 22.—Although there has never been any formal order retracting that of former Governer Gifford Pinchot, state cars no longer are distinguished by the Arizona brown in which high salaried state officials using cars at the state's expense for their own private pleasure trips. The majority of the cars have since been replaced by larger makes but they may be distinguished now only by the word "official" on the license.

Chief criticism of the Pinchot system centered on the cost of painting and the depreciation in resale when the cars were traded in for new ones. Painting the $4,000 and $5,000 cars in the drab brown always raised a storm of protests. When the cars were ready for trade in, dealers always deducted the cost of the new paint job.

Awarding the contract for the second unit of the state memorial bridge was the first step in the completion of more than one half of that structure. Officials in charge do not expect the unit to be completed much before the 1929 legislature gets under way. At that time they hope to get enough additional appropriation to complete the job.

When Governor Fisher left for his vacation he had stayed steadily at the task of filling pending appointments until the entire list was cleaned up. Only those closely in touch with the Governor's office know how carefully each list is checked to make sure that the person intended is being named. More than once it has been learned too late that the person named has died while his name was under consideration.

Engineers Trim Hillsville 15-3

Troop B Team Takes Slugging Match On Hillsville Field Thursday

The troop B team smothered the Hillsville boys under a score of 15 to 3 in a Twilight League game, played at Hillsville Thursday night.

The Engineers had three big innings, the third, fourth and sixth, when they tallied their 15 runs. Houston was on the hill for the soldiers and held Hillsville's 11 hits scattered. Pepe, Riley and Gwin hurled for the losers.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

By NORMAN E. BROWN

It has been stated for many years by various baseball scouts and other experts that there are negro ball players in various parts of the country who might well take rank with the leading major league stars of the same position.

The colored "New York Giants" and other organizations have produced some brilliant baseball pitted against well organized white teams.

I have seen several negro players who seemed to have the ability, finesse and quick brain needed to carry on in big time.

And the other day I watched in action Art Ross, the "Babe Ruth" of the Sioux City, Ia., All-Stars.

Business apart from my sports activities called me to the western metropolis. Once there, I was ensnared into watching the day's best ball game, between the All-Stars and a semi-pro team from Council Bluffs.

On the way to the game Joe Ryan, sports editor of the "Journal", remarked concerning the home run hitting propensities of the aforesaid Ross.

"The mental process, with Ross, is a simple one," said Ryan. "He hits them far enough so that he doesn't have to run around the bases.

"He hits 'em so often that he has had to develop a change of pace to fool the outfielders. He hits some of them to left field—and keeps them in the park. Then he drops some over the right field wall."

All of which paved the way for a dull afternoon for Art Ross. By all the laws of baseball he was due to strike out most of the afternoon—just as the day's hero does after receiving a hand bag or some gold cuff links the first time up.

Ross stepped to the plate for his first appearance.

Three things about him struck one's eye—an odd looking cap that apparently had visors for and aft, a rather semi-bored, semi-tired air as he swung his bat—and a murderous looking stance at the plate.

His first effort was just what Mr. Ryan had suggested. A home run. It landed a foot inside the third base line and rolled to the left field fence.

Ross started around the bases. Enroute he lost his cap. The extra visor proved to be a sun shade. It flew off at second base. The rest of the journey was made under a stocking cap, which struck when the sun shade left.

He came in at an easy lope from third, however, after taking a good look at the outfielder, still on his way out.

The second time up he fanned—with three mighty swings.

His third time up he drove a long fly to center.

His next two hits were—home runs.

The second one dropped over the heads of the left and center fielders. Ross lost his cap and sun shade again—and came in standing up.

His third one?

It went over the right field wall. Over is putting it mildly. It went beyond, as well. anded on the far side of a hay shed 60 or 70 feet apart from the right field fence.

It was just as well that it went over the fence. For there were three men in Ross' way on the bases.

Now, the game, as games go, wasn't a bad game. The colored team faced real opposition—until Ross got into action. The pitcher off whom he collected the homers had never been beaten before by a colored team.

And as for Ross.

Well, he was a picturesque character. He took his baseball as one who loves hero worship would.

But the point I wish to make is this:

That man "hit" the ball. He drove it with all the power of Babe Ruth. He timed his hitting perfectly. There were no wild swings. He worked the pitcher until he got what he wanted—and then lammed it. He knew when he hit the ball just where it was going. There was the co-ordination of leg, body and arm muscles behind that "lam", too.

I'm just wondering how he would look against big league pitching.

* * *

The recent feat of the lowly Boston Red Sox in wiping up the field with the Cleveland Indians twice on the same afternoon not only bespeaks the change the energetic Carrigan has wrought in the Red Sox, but based on the theoretical strength of the Cleveland club, it can be nothing less than a sad commentary on the depths to which the team has fallen.

The collapse of the team must indicate one of two things.

Either Tris Speaker was 75 per cent of the team, offensively, defensively and as a general inspiration.

Or the wrong man was selected to manage the team this year as successor to Speaker.

One cannot write of enough ailments, indispositions and petty grievances among the ball players to account for the poor showing of the team.

Lack of fight in the team—its failure to put over the winning punch at least half the time—can be attributed only to the leadership. Just how free the manager, Jack McCallister, has been to direct his team, enforce discipline on the members, and lay plans for rebuilding the weak spots is unknown, of course.

There was talk of factional feeling, religious differences and what not under Speaker. Whatever differences existed were not apparent in the play of the team.

If harmony came to the team with Speaker's departure it came at great cost—the collapse of the team spirit—the "FIGHT".

The fact that the team is on the market cannot be considered a reasonable excuse for the showing of the team.

It it known that one or two members are breaking training off the field but not that, either, can be used as an all-covering excuse.

The team is simply wandering about in a daze.

My feeling is that only the fact that the club is about to change owners prevents the present officials from taking some drastic measures.

WHISKEY REBELLION SITE MAY BECOME HISTORICAL PARK

(International News Service)

BRIDGEVILEE, Pa., July 22.—The site of the famous whiskey rebellion of 1794—the farm formerly owned by Gen. John Neville, friend of George Washington, near Bower Hill road—soon will become a county park, if the historical society here has anything to say in the matter.

A delegation of the Bridgeville Historical Society members have called on the county commissioners, and urged the adoption of their suggestion.

The delegation explained that the 220-acre farm now is owned by the county poor board, and it might be acquired without cost through a transfer of the deed. The property now is not in use.

The county commissioners expressed themselves as favorably disposed to the project, and voted to meet with the poor board to complete the transfer.

Hydrogen Burning Motors For Dirigible Balloons, Contribution To Flying

Experiments Started At U. S. Bureau Of Standards On Novel Type Carburetor

Powerful Balloons To Provide Comfort And Entertainment For Passengers

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Hydrogen burning motors for dirigible balloons may be the next contribution of science to the commerial conquest of the air.

Experiments have been started at the U. S. Bureau of Standards on a novel type of carburetor which permits the use of a combination of gasoline and hydrogen as fuel, it was learned today.

With the loss of weight by consumption of gasoline under present conditions it is necessary to discharge considerable quantities of the gas contained in the balloon.

Scientists are seeking to develop a carburetor and motor into which can be fed the excess hydrogen from the balloon, thus utilizing what has been a loss adding to the power of the fuel and maintaining a constant weight.

Helium is Expensive

Government experts predicted that practical trans-oceanic commercial flying will be accomplished by lighter than aircraft before airplanes are extensively used in this service.

Because of the high cost and scarcity of helium it will be necessary to ust hydrogen in balloons, provided there is an extensive development of this type of transport. If large sale commercial operations are to be successful every method of cutting down overhead costs must be applied. One step in this diretion is in the practical employment of waste gas, according to experts.

Government experts anticipate that the real pioneering in overseas commercial flying will be done by dirigible type balloons. It was pointed out that where fog-flying and landing problems must be solved before the airplane is entirely successful as a trans-oceanic transport, the big dirigibles can meet this situation much as do the ocean liners—simply by waiting more favorable landing conditions.

Provision must be made for the comfort and entertainment of passengers if the trans-oceanic transport are to beome popular. The power-balloon offers an opportunity for this accomplishment to a greater degree than the airplane. The greater safety of the dirigible also is an important advantage, experts said.

Fisher Delays Naming Successor To W. Harry Baker

Governor To Depart For Vacation Without Naming Man

By I. S. NEIMAN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 22.—Appointment of a successor to W. Harry Baker, late secretary of the state senate and state Republican chairman, will be side-tracked, for the time being, by the vacation of Governor John S. Fisher.

This became apparent today as the governor hurried through routine matters at his office, preparatory to a trip to Mackinac, Mich., for a two weeks' fishing trip. Although Governor Fisher does not appoint the successor to either job, as the ex-officio head of the Republican party in Pennsylvania his say in the matter will be required before the name—or names—are made public.

The matter was further beclouded today by gossip which buzzed about the capitol to the effect that a "dark horse" in the person of John H. Fertig of Pottsville has an inside track for one of the two positions, probably that of secretary of the senate. Fertig joins A. Nevin Detrich of Philadelphia, Howard Rigby of Pittsburgh and C. J. McBride of Pittsburgh as a possibility for one of the two jobs, but observers expect no announcement to be forthcoming from any source until the governor's return from Mackinac.

Schuylkill county considers Fertig one of the most adept parliamentarians in the state and his friends point to his long years of experience in whipping legislation into shape as a qualification for the senate position held by Baker. He is now assistant director of the legislative reference bureau.

Fish, not politics, will be on the program at Mackinac, the governor's friends assert. The governor, worn by long hours of routine at the capitol, is in need of rest. Attaches comment on the hours the Indiana man spends at his office—considerably longer than the great majority of lesser officials. He is one of the first to arrive on Capitol Hill, and it is no unusual sight to find the lights in his private office burning long after dusk, as he grinds away at the seemingly endless flood of routine which is piled on his desk. Veterans at the capitol say he is the most conscientious high official in Pennsylvania today.

School Reports Due In County Before August 1

Financial reports of the secretaries of the 27 school districts outside the city of New Castle and Ellwood City borough and under the supervision of the county superintendent of schools, must be in the hands of County Superintendent J. C. Syling by August 1, it was stated by him this morning, if the respective districts want their state appropriations for the coming year.

There are but five of the 27 reports in his hands now and there are but a few more days of July left in which to file these accounts.

The state law requires that the accounts of the districts must be admitted within 30 days after July 1 and the secretary's report based on the same in the county superintendent's hands by August 1.

As soon as the superintendent is able to verify the reports after recieving them, he must sign them and send them to Harrisburg, where the amount of the state appropriation will be figured out.

German Industry Makes Big Strides

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, July 22.—German industry by the adoption of American methods of production and general modernization is rapidly approaching the point where German is the outstanding factor to be reckoned with American firms in foreign trade according to Assistant Commercial Attache Douglas Miller for the past three years stated at Berlin, who has returned here for conferences with American foreign traders.

Although the real income of the German people has not yet reached the pre-war figure, certain industries have improved their positions" Mr. Miller said. "The chemical plants, for instance which lost most of their former export business in dyestuffs have built up in its place a production of fixed nitrogen with unlimited possibilities for expansion, a number of syntthic compounds such as artificial wood alcohol and artificial petroleum. An experimental plant with a capacity of 1,000 tons a day is now going up in Central Germany where petroleum will be made from low-grade coal.

"The German textile mills are now endeavoring to produce fine counts of yarn formerly obtained either from Great Britain or Alsace The iron and steel industry which has recently been united into a series of combines has some remarkably well-equipped blast furnaces and rolling mills."

What makes so many revolutions in Portugal, anyway? America has no oil wells or mahogany timber there.

Fritz's Opinion Proves Correct

Pre-Fight Belief Published In News Found Accurate

VERY FEW WRITERS SELECTED DEMPSEY

Ed. Fritz, sporting editor of 'the New Castle News', is one of the few writers in the country to publish an accurate opinion as to the outcome of the Dempsey-Sharkey fight last night at New York. He picked Dempsey to win by a knockout if Sharkey "slugged" with Dempsey.

An excerpt from Fritz' story printed before the fight follows:

"Personally the writer believes Dempsey has a chance, despite the opinions of experts. Any man who can hit has a chance—all of the time he is on his feet.

"A blow landed on a vulnerable spot may change a prospective winner to a decided loser. However, Dempsey's chance must come early in the fight.

"Should Sharkey tear into Dempsey at the start of the fight the ex-champ would be on even ground with the title contender. Dempsey should be able to step six rounds at a fast gait and retain sufficient strength to deliver a deadening wallop, if he hits a vulnerable spot.

"Providing they both stand up and slug it out, we'll pin to Dempsey for the first few rounds but if the fight goes over the six we believe that with each suceeding chapter the edge will swing to Sharkey who is young, clever, tough and a fair puncher."

Sharkey did "slug" and was knocked out in the first part of the seventh which shows that the News' sports editor had a good slant on the fight and almost called the very round.

In a 'special article' telling why "Dempsey wanted to win back his title" Fritz said:

"We're hanging to the hunch that Sharkey may want to show the fans that he can punch with Dempsey as soon as the bell rings in the first round."

"Dempsey, at 32, has trained hard and should be able to go at a fast speed for a few rounds. If he does and he 'nails' Sharkey over the heart, in the stomach or on the jaw, Sharkey will go down."

World Metal Men To Read Papers At Tool Exposition

(International News Service)

DETROIT, July 22.—Attention of experts in the steel, iron and other metal industries all over the world will focus on Detroit the week of September 19 when the year's developments throughout the industry will be exchanged through dozens of technical papers written by some of the world's leading metal students.

According to W. H. Eisenman, secretary of the American Society for Steel Treating, who is arranging the ninth annual national steel and machine tool exposition, more than 25,000 scientists and executives will attend the various technical sessions that will be held during the exposition.

Foreign contributors of papers to these sessions will include W. H. Hatfield of Brown-Firth Research Laboratories, Sheffield, England; J. S. G. Primrose, Manchester, England, who will have as his subject "Practical Experience in Heat Treatment of Wire and Rods for the Making of High Strength Wire by the Patenting Process"; Dr. Kotaro Honda and Prof. Sansaku Miura, both of Tohoku Imperial university, Sendai, Japan, whose subject will be "The Determination of the Heterogeneous Field in Iron-Nickel Alloys"; Col. N. Belaieu, native of Russia, now of Queen's Gate, London, on "Grain Growth Studies of Metals"; and Dr. Benjt. Kjerrman, metallurgist for S. K. F. Industries, Gothenburg, Sweden, on "Heat Treatment of Ball Bearing Steels."

Motion Pictures Give No Evidence Dempsey Hit Foul

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 22.—The official motion pictures taken by the Jack Sharkey-Jack Dempsey battle in the Yankee Stadium last night give no evidence to support Sharkey's claim that he was fouled. The pictures, placed on public exhibition this afternoon, show that Dempsey's right to the body, immediately preceding the knockout punch, landed just on the edge of Sharkey's belt.

Reading Solicitor Resigns His Post

READING, July 22.—City Solicitor Dickinson submitted his resignation to council and it was accepted with expressions of regret. The vast amount of work which has fallen to the lot of the city solicitor's office because of the many important municipal projects under way led Mr. Dickinson to ask to be relieved of the position. The resignation becomes effective August 1.

Hurled 30 Feet; Slightly Hurt

BLOOMSBURG, Pa., July 22.—Tossed 30 feet by a passenger train when his truck was reduced to splinters on a grade crossing at Espy, Conrad Hess, a Wapwallopen merchant brushed himself and refused to be taken to a hospital or a doctor.

He landed in a large mudhole and said he was only slightly bruised.

Young Navigator Tries To Voyage With Inner Tube

(International News Service)

RICHMOND, Staten Island, N. Y., July 22.—Leo Bruzdowski, aged seven, has taught the old salts of New York Harbor something new in voyaging.

Leo went to the seashore with his parents and struck up an acquaintance with two boys who possessed an inflated inner-tube of an automobile tire which they were using to float about on the water with. Although Leo wore his Sunday clothes he joined in the sport and the three lads paddled about clinging to the tube. An incoming tide carried them beyond their depth. Two of the boys "abandoned ship," and paddled ashore. Not so with Leo. He decided to navigate the inner tube ashore, but he failed. Little by little he was swept away from the shore until he was too far out to cry for aid. Then Leo merely clung to the tube and drifted. He tried to attract the attention of passing boats but to no avail. After five and a half hours of drifting Leo was picked up by a motor-boat seven miles from the seaside resort where he had had his first adventure with the inner tube. Leo was in a semi-conscious condition when picked up but his tiny fingers still clung to the tube and at the hospital it was announced he would recover.

German Aviators Hope To Break Flight Record

(International News Service)

DESSAU, July 22.—The German pilots Lohse and Ritich took the air at 4:45 this morning in a Junker plane, built for a trans-Atlantic flight, in an attempt to break the world's record for continuous flying, now held by Clarence Chamberlin and Bert Acosta.

At noon seven hours and 15 minutes after their take-off, the pilots had covered 1,000 kilometres, flying back and forth between Dessau and Leipzig.

It is understood that if the flight is a success and the record is broken, the plane will be made ready for an early hop across the Atlantic.

Man Is Fined For Reckless Driving Of Horse And Wagon

MIDDLEBORO, Mass., July 22.—Shades of the "gay nineties" were recalled in the District court yesterday when Joseph Westgate paid a $10 fine for recklessly driving a horse and wagon.

The twentieth century got into the picture, however, when Motorcycle Policeman M. O. Murdock told Judge Washburn that Westgate sideswiped an automobile and then attempted to escape by whipping up. The policeman admitted the race was nearly even until Westgate's wagon shed a spoke and he had to halt.

Plan To License History Writers

(International News Service)

STANDARD UNIVERSITY, Cal. July 22.—Licensing of historians was advanced today by Carl R. Fish, professor of history at the summer school here, as a means of checking the recent attacks on great historical figures.

According to Dr. Fish who holds the chair of American history at the University of Wisconsin, there are a few good biographies of American statesmen in print.

Speaking of the great men of the past who have been presented to the public by biographers, the professor said, "Many of them are present as demi-gods and much or all that is common in their lives is omitted by the biographers. It is true that many of the statements made by the 'popular writers are facts, but they are misinterpreted."

Doctor Fish pointed to Rupert Hughes' "The Life of Washington" as an example of the modern method of writing the life story of great men. The fact that George Washington owned a still was discounted by the historian who said that in Washington's day it was neither against the law nor socially improper. If it were against the law, Professor Fish said, Washington would not have a still in his possession.

"That is where Mr. Hughes was in error," the savant said, "It is in similar ways that other writers err; they fail to take into consideration the vast differences in social usage between this time and that with which they are dealing.

"These men are not trained historians, and would not know how to tell the exact truth if they were so inclined. I think that it would be very well to require all historians to be licensed, for I consider the recording of history as much of a profession as that of law, medicine or engineering."

Says Motorists Should Be Less Hasty On Wet Days

New Castle motorists should be more careful when driving their machines through the streets of this city on rainy days.

Pedestrians are complaining these days about "duckings" or "near-duckings" they are receiving from hasty motorists. Drivers of machines should feel their responsibility of bringing their car to a slow speed when passing through a puddle of water during or after a rain so as to save anyone who might happen to be near from a drenching.

New Castle motorists are not the only ones to blame. Motorists from other cities sometimes are guilty, but nevertheless there are too many drivers in this city who seem to have no consideration of the pedestrian.

After a heavy rain the water glides down the side of the street and when it reaches a sewer, not capable of holding all the water, it spreads out over the street. Some careless drivers speed through this, sometimes soaking several persons.

Pedestrians have a right to walk on the sidewalks and the careless motorists should remember this. One of the meanest acts that can be done is this. Let's have it stopped in New Castle.

Pledge Support To Sacco And Vanzetti

(International News Service)

SCRANTON, Pa., July 22.—Five hundred delegates attending the convention of District No. 1, United Mine Workers of America today pledged their wholehearted support to Sacco and Vanzetti, Socialists, under sentence of death in Massachusetts for the alleged slaying of a payroll guard and his assistant.

"The whole world knows they are innocent and were convicted on framed up charges after one of the most prejudiced and biased trials in the history of American jurisprudence," the resolution passed by the delegates read in part.

Charges Queen Mary Coaching Witnesses Inside Court Room

By WILLIAM J. BUTLER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., July 22.—Chief Prosecutor George E. Nichols electrified the courtroom here today when he charged that "Queen" Mary Purnell, wife of "King" Benjamin Purnell, leader of the House of David, is secretly coaching girl witnesses from the side-lines. "Queen" Mary, by a system of signals, is directing the girls how to testify in "King" Ben's favor in the state's dissolution suit against the cult, Nicholas declared.

Women May Smoke If They Desire To

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Smoke rings may curl around typewriter keys if young women employes at marine headquarters here desire to smoke, under a ruling made today by Brig. Gen. Rufus H. Lane, adjutant and inspector of the marine corps. Lane held that the same rules regarding smoking that apply to men also apply to women employes.

Life Insurance Employes' Picnic

The combined New Castle and Sharon offices of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company will picnic at Cascade park on Saturday. About 35 agents and their families will attend.

Mr. Carey and Mr. Allen of the local office and Mr. Wise of the Sharon office are in charge of the picnic.

Plan N. Y.-Paris Round Trip Hop In 24-Hour Day

Special Plane Having Two 1,280 H. P. Engines Soon To Be Tried

New York Man Claiming Invention Of A Special Fuel For Plane

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 22.—The recent trans-ocean non-stop flights will narrow down from epochal events to the level of a monotonous street-car ride if R. Rex Rennee's ambitious plans for an airplane trip that will send a thrill-loving world into ineffable ecstasy materialize.

Rennee, sales manager for an electric company and he says, an experienced aviator, not only harbors the belief that it is possible to make a non-stop round-trip flight between New York and Paris, but expects to accomplish this stupendous undertaking within the next few months.

Furthermore, he blandly asserts, he anticipates making the flight to Paris and return in 24 hours, a little more than half the time required for the trans-Alantic trips that were only half the distance he expects to cover.

Ready In September

In September, Rennee says, he will take off on his ambitious flight in a special airplane equiped with two special 1,280 horsepower Packard motors using a special fuel he himself has invented.

The plane as he describes it would shove the present type into the same background to which the horse and buggy were relegated by the automobile, one would judge.

It will have a cruising speed of 300 miles an hour with a maximum speed of 375 miles an hour, Rennee declares. Where is this super-plane? It is being built. Where is it being built? Rennee would not say.

Is Expert Aviator

Rennee says he was born in France and is a graduate of Oxford University. During the world war, he recites, he was a colonel of the famous Lafayette Escadrille and he claims the distinction of having been the fourth ranking flying ace of the entire conflict with forty enemy planes to his credit.

He would not make known the nature of the new fuel he says he has invented but volunteered the information that it is concentrated in small tubes and that the mixing of the tube in a specified quantity of water would result in a fuel that would enable an airplane to travel at a greater speed than any yet attained.

His plane, Rennee asserts will not carry gasoline, but water, instead, and when he is in need of fuel he will merely drop a tube of fuel into the water.

Cleveland Has Homicide Rate For Big Cities

Nine Murders Annually For Every 100,000 Is High Record

Four Hundred Persons Killed In Ohio Metropolis Since January, 1922

(International News Service)

CLEVELAND, O., July 22.—With nine murders annually for every 100,000 of population, Cleveland leads the cities in its proportional homicide rate.

This information was made public in a recent report of the Cleveland Association for Criminal Justice. It is based on figures for the year ending June 30, 1927.

A person living in Cleveland has 21 times greater chance of being murdered than one living in London, Eng., the report shows.

Homicidal Wave

Moreover, the "homicidal wave" here seems to be on the increase, as 47 murders have occurred within the city since the first of the year. Approximately 40 percent remain unsolved.

Inadequate police facilities and failure of city council to appropriate more money for the police department are responsible for the Association. The report says, in part:

"In a bulletin issued September 30, 1926, the Association published the comparative sizes of the police forces of various large cities of Europe and the United States. Cleveland ranked lowest in the ration of policemen to population.

"More than 400 men, women and children have been murdered in the city of Clevcland since January 1, 1922; almost half a hundred murders have been committed during the past six months within the well-paved, newly widened and brilliantly lighted streets of Cleveland.

Friendship Ties France-America Are Now Secure

No Ill-Feeling Between The Countries Declares Noted Frenchman

By ALICE LANGELIER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, July 22.—"The ties of friendship between America and France were never more secure," declares Albert Gallatin, art critic of New York City, who for many years has been doing much to build up this friendship. "Lindbergh's success was a fine answer to the cynics who think there is so much ill-feeling between the two countries.

"What little irritation there is—and I find very little—is all on the surface. France at the bottom, has great affection for America and is particularly curious in all that is going on in the young democracy which she feels has been a success."

Mr. Gallatin's great-grandfather was one of the first ministers from the United States to France. That was back in 1817. Mr. Gallatin himself spends six months of the year here and the other half in New York City. Just now he is picking up the best works of modern artists in Europe to take back to the new gallery of modern art in New York university, the plans of which are just being discussed by the committee, of which Mr. Gallatin and Henry McBride are chairmen.

It is hoped to erect a building and build up a permanent collection of important examples of contemporary painting, sculpture and drawing and also arrange loan exhibitions. There will be no favorite schools, but a real recognition of merit. Freshness, a personal point of view, life and vitality as distinguished from the academic, will be the qualities looked for.

Mr. Gallatin has selected drawings by Picasso and Matisse to take back with him. Jacques Mauny, Roux and Lapique are included among the most talented French representatives. John Marin and Charles Demuth, painters, and Gaston Lachaise and Eli Nadelman, sculptors, will represent America in the new gallery. These four, according to the art critic, have first rate ability and compare very favorably with any European artists.

"Art in America," says Mr. Gallatin, "is in a healthy state today, and we are making great progress along every line. The stage designing in the Revues is far ahead of what one sees in Paris and our architecture leads the world.

"Our industrial arts, however, lag behind those of Europe. I would like to see many of our poor artists leave off doing poor landscapes and turn their wits to fine book-binding, the making of lovely silk curtains and other decorative bits which make the world a better place to live in."

THIS WOMAN FOUND RELIEF

After Long Suffering by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

In a little town of the Middle West, was a discouraged woman. For four months she had been in such poor health that she could not stoop to put on her own shoes. Unable to do her work, unable to go out of doors or enjoy a friendly chat with her neighbors, life seemed dark indeed to Mrs. Daugherty.

Then one day, a booklet was left at her front door. Idly she turned the pages. Soon she was reading with quickened interest. The little booklet was filled with letters from women in conditions similar to hers who had found better health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I began taking the Vegetable Compound," Mrs. Daugherty writes, "and after I took the third bottle, I found relief. I am on my eleventh bottle and I don't have that trouble any more, and feel like a different woman. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to everyone I see who has trouble like mine. I am willing to answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Ed. Daugherty, 1308 Orchard Ave., Muscatine, Iowa.

Lure Of Paris Ousts Reno As Divorce Mecca

Joys Of European Trip With Gay Life Winning Over Nevada City

Marital Misfits Undone With Little Discomfort By Seine Tribunal

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 22.—Reno is losing its prestige as the divorce mecca of wealthy and socially prominent Americans. The lure of Paris and the Seine tribunal where marital misfits are undone with a minimum of inconvenience and discomfort are making serious inroads into the heretofore prosperous industry of the Nevada metropolis.

First, there is the trip itself. Who would prefer the pleasure of an ocean voyage on a comfortable and commodious trans-Atlantic liner equipped with every luxury, landing one at Havre or Cherbourg with a short boat-train trip to Paris, all within a week, to five days across the American continent aboard a cramped and stuffy train to Reno?

A Short Wait.

And then the wait of a few months to establish a residence and get a separation decree. How much pleasanter that time can be spent in Paris with its operas, revues, cabarets, night clubs, dance palaces and what not than in Reno with its scant 12,000 population and virtually nothing to do but wait there on the fringe of a desert and mountain waste.

The answer is clear. Paris wins. And to prove it the United States census bureau which delves into all kinds of statistics is just out with figures showing how Reno's divorce industry is on the decline.

In 1925 the courts in the state of Nevada granted a total of 1,082 divorces of which 798 were awarded at Reno. In 1926 the state's total had slumped to 1,091 with Reno's quota down to 756 a loss for the state of 61 and for Reno of 42 in the year.

Reno Loses Ground.

It may be a bit surprising to discover that as Reno is losing ground in divorces it is gaining in marriages at a rate that within a few years promises to elevate the marrying parson to a higher pinacle than the divorcing judge.

In 1925 Nevada had 1,122 marriages which in 1926 jumped to 1,228 a gain of 106. Reno's share in 1925 was 513 which had increased in 1926 to 558 a gain of 45 a bigger gain in marriages than loss in divorces.

The last year was no exception. The trend has been about the same for several years since Americans began flocking to Paris to do their divorce shopping along with their shopping for hats and lingerie.

Seventh Ward

Ward Churches Plan For Vacation

August Is Vacation Month In Ward; Other News Notes Of Seventh Ward

The churches in the seventh ward are making their plans for the summer vacation.

In the Mahoning Presbyterian church the pastor Rev. D. C. Schnebly will be away during the month of August. He is planning to spend at least a part of his vacation with relatives at Cherrytree, Pa. There will be no preaching service in the church during this month, morning or evening. Sabbath school will probably be conducted at the usual time as in past years.

In the Madison Avenues Christian church beginning this month and continuing the rest of the summer there is only one preaching service in the church on Sunday. Bible school is held at the usual time with the preaching service following. But no services are held in the church Sunday evening or Wednesday evening. Instead of dispensing with church service entirely for one month, this church is having its vacation this way. The pastor, Rev. W. W. Sniff, is preaching at this church service each Sunday.

In the Mahoning M. E. church plans are not quite complete, but there will be church services each Sunday. The pastor of the church, Rev. J. N. Croxall, plans to be away two Sundays—the second and third Sundays of the month. But there will be at least one church service on these days. There will also be Sabbath school at the usual hour.

VISITING HERE

Lawrence Rafferty of Girard, O., is visiting at the home of his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Rafferty on Newell avenue.

LOOKOUT CLASS

The Lookout class of the Mahoning M. E. church taught by Mrs. J. A. Waddell had its picnic at Cascade park Thursday evening. Thirty-six members were present. A delicious picnic supper was enjoyed at 6 o'clock. Following the supper the evening was spent with the park amusements and having a general good time.

Committee in charge of the arrangements for the picnic was comprised of Mrs. Larue King, Mrs. Mildred Westman and Mrs. Agnes Conn.

DINNER CLUB

The Thursday Tureen Dinner Club had a picnic at Cascade Park Thursday evening. Fourteen attended. An elaborate picnic supper was enjoyed. Following the supper the evening was spent with the park amusements. Committee in charge of the arrangements for the picnic was comprised of Mrs. J. P. Walter, Mrs. W. W. Waid and Mrs. Myron Olmstead.

The next meeting of the club will be in four weeks. On August 18 the club members will have another picnic. Committee in charge of this next picnic is Mrs. E. M. Johnston, Mrs. H. S. Gillespie and Mrs. W. C. Woods.

Gov. Small Adopted By Sioux Indians

(International News Service)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 22.—Governor Len Small of Illinois is now by tribal adoption a brother of the diminishing tribe of Sioux Indians, and by that band of warriors the Illinois executive has been renamed Chief Swift Bird. He is to them the reincarnation of a departed chieftain who once ranked high in their tribunals, according to tradition.

This honor was bestowed upon the governor by a band of Indians under Chief Returned From the Scouts, trouping with a circus. President Harding during his administration received this recognition.

The beautiful tribal custom fittingly performed by the Indians here formed a novel opening of the circus.

Surrounded by his warriors, their squaws and papooses, Chief Returned From The Scouts formally and solemnly initiated Chief Swift Bird. In his native tongue, with his right hand upraised, the dusky warrior administered an impressive oath. The initiate, with due solemnity, accepted the honor, probably joining the crowd in wondering what it was all about.

The newly admitted brother was presented with a spear, entirely sheathed in ornamental feathers. The feathers render the weapon useless as an implement of war and therefore donates peace, in accordance with the signs and symbols of the Sioux.

In conclusion of the inauguration, the entire tribe, in full regalia performed the dance of peace.

Akron To Build Dirigible For N. Y.-Paris Trip

Round Trip Without Stop Planned For New Ship Ready Soon

Will Carry Crew Of 45, With Fuel Load Enough To Cross Pacific

(International News Service)

AKRON, O., July 22.—A dirigible is to be constructed here soon which will be able to fly from New York to Paris and return without stopping, according to President P. W. Litchfield, of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, head of the Goodyear-Zeppelin corporation.

The big airship will be able to make the round-trip carrying a crew of forty-five and a full load, according to predictions. Under test conditions, with a small crew and a maximum fuel load, such a dirigible should be able to fly across the Pacific and back, local airship designers declare.

Pointing out that trans-ocean flights, such as recently have brought recognition of the efficiency of the modern airplane, have been made three times by dirigible airship, Litchfield cited six outstanding dirigible flights as "milestones in the development of lighter-than-air-craft navigation," as follows:

Big Flights

1917—The L-59 flew from Jambol, Bulgaria to German East Africa and back on a 4,225 mile, non-stop flight, accuping a little less than four days.

1922—The British R-34 flew over the Atlantic to Mitchell Field, L. I. refueled and returned.

1923—The Dixmude made a four day flight and return over the Mediterranean and North Africa.

1924—The Shenandoah made a trip of 8,000 miles around the rim of the American continent.

1924—The Los Angeles made a 5,-100 mile trip from Central Europe to Lakehurst, N. J.

1926—The semi-rigid Norge made the epochal four-leg trip from Rome, Italy to Point Barrow, Alaska, stoping at Pulham, Eng.; Oslo, Norway; Spitzbergen, then over the North Pole covering a distance approximately 7,000 miles.

"With this background, we are ready to consider what difficulties and dangers the airship has to face and to inquire what steps have been made to alleviate them," Litchfield declared.

"The first, of course, is weather. Snow and ice have little effect. The doped cover of the Zeppelin type craft sheds water and snow blows off the airship in flight.

Danger from lightning is practically non-existent. The greatest danger is from storms but storms travel in easily observable paths and with a concentric motion, which will enable pilots to hold that hazard at a minimum. Having adequate information in regard to the storm's course, the airship pilot would not run away, but would steer for, and utilize the drift."

Work Starts Soon

Work on the "super-Zeppelin" is expected to start here within two months. The Goodyear-Zeppelin design has already been accepted by the United States Navy, to take the place of the ill-fated Sheenandoah, which broke in two near Caldwell, Ohio, two years ago.

The new airship will have a gas capacity of 6,500,000 cubic feet as compared with the 2,400,000 carried by the Los Angeles.

The super-dirigible will be 780 feet long, 134 feet wide and 145 feet in height. With its six 650-horse power motors it will have a speed of approximately 80 miles per hour and a crusing range, with a maximum load, of 8,000 miles.

According to the plans, the ship will be able to ascend five miles with greater rapidity than most airplanes. Its motors and cabins will be inclosed in a triplex hull and it will be armed with machine guns and light artillery. Specifications call for the carrying of six airplanes as an auxiliary, it was said.

Lindbergh Asks Friend "Jake" To Make Plans

"Slim" Makes Effort To Persuade Manufacturer To Join Him

Would Build Factory In St. Louis To Develop His Aviation Program

(International News Service)

WITCHITA, Kansas, Juy 22.—"Hello, that you Jake?" said Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, New York to Paris hero, talking over long distance telephone.

"Yeah, Slim. How are you? Congratulations!"

Thus the American air hero conversed with J. M. Moellendick, president of the Swallow Airplane Manufacturing company of Witchita, Kansas.

It was not feigned or professional familiarity that tinged the conversation. It was friendship of long standing.

Starting Factory

"Jake, are you coming to St. Louis to build airplanes?" Lindbergh asked. "I'm thinking of starting a factory here and would like to know if you are coming up," he said.

"Haven't had time to give it a thought, Slim. Business is so good right here that really I don't see any reason for making a move," Moellendick declared.

And, so the conversation continued for about fifteen minutes, with Lindbergh failing to get any kind of a promise from Jake Moellendick to move to St. Louis, and help him develop a new airplane project.

Swamped With Orders

Moellendick went to St. Louis in response to attractive offers that enterprising city made for the operation of a Swallow factory there, a few months ago, but declined to negotiate with interests there.

The youthful manufacturer says he has been literally swamped with orders for airplanes ever since "Lindy" landed at Le Bourget field in France.

Hungary Will Tax Childless Couples

(International News Service)

BUDAPEST, July 22.—Childless married couples, as well as bachelors, will be taxed in Hungary for the benefit of children and sick people if a new social welfare bill becomes a law.

Drafted by the minister of national welfare, the bill provides that the inheritance taxes shall be graduated in inverse ratio to the number of children in the family, while simultaneously a special "punishment" tax will be levied on bachelors and childless married couples.

The proceeds of the tax are to be devoted to a double purpose: child welfare and the special aeroplane service soon to be inaugurated for rushing urgent cases to the Budapest hospitals from places in the province where the hospital equipment is limited.

New Diesel Engine For Immense Ships

(International News Service)

BELFAST, July 22—A sensational development in the Diesel engine for ships is foreshadowed in a report that preliminary steps were taken at Harland and Wolffe's engine shops here to build an engine of close on 100,000 horsepower.

As an engine of this size would require a vessel of over 5,000 tons, it is inferred that the new engine is designed for the mammoth new White Star liner to be built here.

At present the most powerful Diesel engine in the world is about 25,-000 horsepower.

First Non-Stop Flight Made In Boston In 1757

Pioneer Aviator Hopped Off From Spire Revere Watched For Lanterns

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's New York-to-Paris flight was made just 170 years after John Childs, Esq., completed the first non-stop flight in America, says a writer in the Portland Oregonian.

On September 13, 1757, Mr. Childs "hopped off" from the belfry of the church which Paul Revere watched for his signals eighteen years later. His exhibition caused such great concern in the Bay State colony that the Mayor of Boston had to declare an official ban. The marvel at his achievement was nearly as great, relatively, as it was when the report of young Mr. Lindbergh's successful flight was flashed around the world.

The Childs event is noted in a tablet set into the brick wall around historic Old North Church. This placque was dedicated in 1923 to commemorate the Childs flight from the belfry and also the first non-stop transcontinental hop of 1923.

Appreciate of the importance of his attempt, Mr. Childs had given public notice he would perform an experiment in aerodonetics. Although the wheels of publicity did not revolve as rapidly in 1757. Boston turned out en masse for the event.

It is believed he used a glider of his own invention, for there was plenty of space around the church he could use as a landing field.

Pilot Child's first descent went off in great fashion. The assemblage demanded for an encore, and once more he hopped off from the ledge of Old North's tall spire. With this attempt successfully recorded, the flier was persuaded to add still further glory to his name by making a third climactic leap. He did this in royal style, for while in mid-air he fired a pistol as the crowds acclaimed him madly.

Further details of the flight from Old North Church are lacking.

Fourteen-Mile Hike For Scouts

Many Other Features Mark Day At Camp Phillips

TREASURE HUNT IS MUCH ENJOYED

A fourteen mile hike in the late morning and afternoon at Camp Phillips under the glare and heat of a July sun, proves once more how a Scout is trained to overcome obstacles barring the way to his ideal.

The hike was officered by James Charbonnier in charge of group No. 1 and Jack Stone in charge of group No. 2, substituting Tedd Ropp unavoidably detained. The hikers visited the Y. M. C. A. camp where they fraternized with the McConnell Mills boys. Fourteen Scouts participated in this hike, and their names are as follows: George Bentram, "Baldy" Henry, William McClintock, Nathaniel Book, Clayton Houck, Robert Buquo, James Wilson, Jess Sowash, W. G. Patterson, Aubrey Renno, Melvin Caplin, Chester Caldwell, Elmer McKim and Dave Harris.

John Boston of the Camp Staff, and a deep student of Nature Studies, led a party of twenty scouts to the original site of the first Scout Camp at Muddy Creek, and the officer in charge reports numerous specimens collected and classified.

Kite Flying Contest-Treasure Hunt

On a spacious and elevated field amidst a chorus of happy voices a kite flying contest was held, eighteen teams entered the competition and the first, second and third winners were respectively: William Thomas and Bob Johnson, Geo. Fox and Jim Hannon, Loyd Davis and Lawrence Roxbury. A kite 2 miles up in the air is the highest figure yet submitted.

Jack Hulme and Scoutmasters

Scoutmaster Jack Hulme of Westminster College taught during the day day several classes the fine points of life saving and resuscitation, his course was followed by all who were not otherwise engaged and real knowledge was acquired by all the members of the several units instructed. Rev. Dr. James Charbonnier, Rev. Andrew Signore and Mr. R. F. Davis are the additional instructors passing on the several scout tests.

Treasure Hunt

Not one scout was missing from the great Treaure Hunt, which had been so skillfully worked out by the staff, and it was an amusing sight to watch a hundred and twenty five boys run and ramble all over the camp, leaving nothing unsearched and exercising their wits and cunning in trying to discover the treasure. At dusk the hunt was over and the Kit Carson stockade emerged victor, the roster of the stockade being: Renn Kerr, Linder, Von Berg, Speerhas, Wolfe, Hessler, Houck, Buque, Brendes, Sento, Moses, Vargo, Szabo, Turek, Morse and Charles Smith.

Visitors and Movies

A large number of visitors came from all parts of Lawrence County to visit the camp. Scoutmaster Earl Herbert came to renew acquaintanceship with brother Scoutmasters and reports that Wampum Troop No. 1, is forging ahead.

L. B. Round spent several hours at Camp Phillips today and as a member of the Boy Scout Council, he evinced a keen interest in everything pertaining to the welfare of this institution, and gave freely of his advice and work in perfecting some electrical installation and we all thank him for his continued interest.

At nine o'clock several reels were shown in the auditorium, being views taken by the Scout Executive of activities in the camp, familiar faces and incidents came before the eyes of the audience, which filled all the seats with scores standing.

After a visit to the popular "refreshments" counter in the camp store, the boys and in fact, every one was willing to call it "a day." With bodies made suple by gym, exercises and games, with the mind enriched by a collection of ideas, and with the heart made stouter by an attitude of reverence toward the higher life, Camp Phillips has proved to be another day a "Gymnasium" for body, mind and soul.

Man Soon Able To Control Height, Looks, And Character By Chemistry, Says Prof.

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Kansas, July 22.—That man may some day be able to control his height, improve his looks, increase his ability and make charater what it should be—all by means of chemistry—was forecast in an address before the Kansas State Teachers college here by Dr. Edwin E. Slosson, scientist and writer.

"Hitherto the chemist has confined himself to the humble task of providing the conveniences of life," Dr. Slosson said. "In the future he may gain control of life itself. He may mold stature and character as the sculptor molds his clay."

Explaining that the attractive or repellent qualities in personality are due to minute amounts of certain chemical compounds called horomones in the blood, Dr. Slosson said that these hormones and vitamines will some day be manufactured in the chemist's laboratory.

Withdraws His Resignation And Then Gets Fired

UNIONTOWN, Pa., July 22.—After withdrawing his resignation, which was to have become effective today, County Detective R. C. Bledsoe was discharged by District Attorney Edward Brown yesterday. His stormy tenure of office lasted one year.

Bledsoe resigned on July 22, 1926, as head of the Baltimore & Ohio police force in Connellsville to accept the position of county detective.

It is hinted that the three judges may not approve the choice of District Attorney Brown and that an effort will be made to have Bledsoe returned to his former position until the end of the year when Brown's term will expire.

Falls Seven Stories To Her Death In Atlantic City

ATLANTIC CITY, July 22—Whether Miss Lillian Jaeger, the daughter of the late Otto Jaeger, wealthy New York plush manufacturer, fell accidentally seven stories to her death or whether she committed suicide had not yet been determined last night, although County Physician Souder was convinced that it was an accident. Her body was found yesterday afternoon outside the President hotel, where she had an apartment on the seventh floor.

Miss Jaeger had arrived at the hotel July 15. Upon the occasion of one of her visits it was learned that Dr. V. E. Johnson had treated her for a minor ailment.

George Rosendale, attorney for the Jaeger estate, said he knew of no reason why Miss Jaeger should commit suicide. Rosendale has not been able to communicate with Miss Jaeger's mother, who is in Saranac Lake, N. Y.

Col. Lindbergh Thrills Rhode Island Crowd

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 22.—Whistles, bells, automobile horns, and human voices united in providing a welcome for Col. Charles S. Lindbergh yesterday when he came to Providence, the second city to be visited in his national air tour.

For fifteen minutes Col. Lindbergh cavorted about the skies in his Spirit of St. Louis. He would dip low over the heart of the city and then sail majestically into the sunlight.

After pleasing thousands, he took off to the south to Quonset Point, the nearest landing field to the city, where a municipal reception committee and thousands of spectators awaited.

"Why should I buy your tire?"

Come into our store, and ask this question, man to man: Why should I buy your tire? You won't need to ask another.

Your one best buy in tires is the new Goodyear All-Weather Balloon for these reasons:

1 Its sturdy carcass is made of SUPERTWIST, which means fewer fabric failures and less tire changes on the road.

2 Its new design of tread gives the best traction and car control ever afforded by an automobile tire.

3 Its tenacious ability to grip the road gives the greatest possible degree of safety.

4 Increased area of road contact and added All-Weather blocks insure slow, even tread wear and greater satisfaction to the user.

5 Quietness and smooth running are also made certain by the new design of tread.

6 As the perfected form of the famous All-Weather pattern, this new Goodyear is admittedly the World's Most Beautiful Tire.

The best proof of all this is the tire itself. Come in today and see this masterpiece, the new Goodyear All-Weather Balloon.

Look To West Soviet Slogan In New Policy

Change In Program Now Seen As Tchitcherin Is Back At Helm

Pressing Need Of Western Help Leading Russians To Change Front

(International News Service)

MOSCOW, July 22—"Look to the West," appears to be the watchword of a marked new foreign policy of the Soviet Government. Tchitcherin, once more at the helm as Commissar, for Foreign Affairs after six months of medical treatment, rest cures interspersed with diplomatic discussions in Germany and France is already making his influence felt in no uncertain terms.

What was a painstakingly built up chain of friendship extending across Europe from London to Teheran has not only been shortened but strained by a series of mishaps which many in the Foreign office collegium are known to believe could have been avoided.

Need Western Help

As a union of 143,000,000 people, 85 per cent of whom are peasants or villagers, everybody knows that the program of industrial development can't be carried out without the help of Western powers. Despite this blunders have been made. Notes to Poland after the assassination of Peter Voikoff, Soviet ambassador to Warsaw, are now regarded as having been unnecessarily bitter. There was no use in dispatching such a sharp reply to Finland's note protesting the execution of George Elvengren, a Finnish citizen, for alleged British espionage.

Tchitcherin's first job, it is said, will be to smooth down points of friction. His familiarity with Western statesmen and peoples is expected to aid him in attaining the goal which the Collegium decided upon long ago, but couldn't quite put across. That goal is what is regarded here as heading of British attempts at formation of an armed anti-Soviet front.

Afraid of War

"A war would shake the foundations of the Soviet Union and probably smash it as war would every other country of Europe at this time," said one high official.

It was the official Communist press in Russia, however, which harped on the war scare day in and day out for political reasons. Since Tchitcherin's return there has been little war talk. He is said to have convinced press chiefs that peace, which is earnestly desired, can't be maintained when somebody is always shouting about the danger of war.

Whether closer friendly relations will lead to loans so urgently needed in the Soviet Union is doubted even here. Hope for additional credit centers on Germany and the United States. Trade with both countries can be increased. Then comes France and Poland.

In every respect Tchitcherin's big job is in Europe, not in Asia. China has virtually been given up.

The Franco-Russian uegotiations for a trade treaty, which includes settlement of the French war loans to the Czar, will be pushed, it is stated, more vigorously than before.

Gold Digging May Be Stopped

Men Who Pay And Pay And Pay Are Now Rebelling At Fate

CHICAGO, July 22.—Gold digging and profiteering in the divorce courts may be stopped by the organization of half a hundred of Chicago's rebels, men who say that the present laws prescribe that they shall pay and pay and pay. These men have organized an alimony club by means of which they intend to take the fight against the divorce gold diggers into their own camp, the divorce court.

Among the founders of the club is a woman who said that she was working to help her husband pay an allowance to his former wife, who is spending it in riotous living.

Another man is paying alimony to a former wife who is working and making more than he is; while yet another of the charter members says that the money which he is paying is being used to support another man.

The rank and file of the club includes a man who said that he had dodged 47 cities to avoid paying alimony; one who said that his wife dosed his coffee with carbolic acid and then ran off with a neighbor; a man who invented a bullet proof vest after a set-to with his wife, and one who married a bigamist, who was collecting money from five ex-husbands.

The founders expect the club to become a national organization, with established bureaus for preventing unfair divorces, for effecting reconciliations and for other concomitant duties.

As set forth in the by-laws, the duty of the club is to "create public sentiment, promote legislation and aid in the litigation to stop gold digging, crooked attorneys, and framing detective agencies from profiteering in the divorce courts."

Locals of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America are now electing delegates to the national convention of their organization, which is to meet in Birmingham, Ala., beginning September 12.

A general increase in workmen's compensation rates for Massachusetts will come into effect July 26 for the chief classifications.

PETERS ADVENTURES IN ANIMAL LAND

By Florence Smith Vincent

BAKED IN A MUD CAKE

What in the world was the matter with Froggie? The fellow seemed to be hopping around in circles. His yellow eyes gleamed in the darkness now on this side of Peter, now on that. The boy grew dizzy trying to keep track of the headlights. At last he could stand it no longer.

"Anything wrong, Froggie," cried Peter. "Is someone chasing you or are you just playing tag with yourself? I'll do anything I can to help you if you are in trouble, but if you are trying to tease me, please stop! It is not any too pleasant down here on the shores of the pond, anyhow, and with you bobbing about like a crazy grasshopper, not saying a word but staring at me with those great eyes of yours, it makes me feel as if I were having a bad dream. Stand still a minute, do. I want to ask you a question."

"Wants to bother me with a question when I am so happy I want to dance!" croaked Froggie crossly, but nevertheless he stopped circling about and drew close to the boy. "That's the way with some folks—always ready to stop the other fellow's having a good time. Well, out with it! What do you want to know?"

"You said a little while ago that when the cold weather drew near you frogs crawled into the mud and went to sleep. Now just suppose the pond should dry up while you were napping and the mud become caked and hard—so hard that you couldn't push your way out of it. What would you do then?" Peter waited curiously to hear what Froggie would have to say and in a moment that fellow spoke.

"A very clever question, boy. A very clever question," croaked Froggie, his ill-humor vanished. "Such a thing has never happened in my time, thank goodness, but I remember a story my grandfather used to tell me. He said that one winter when his grandfather was very young he and all his neighbors were caught just like that. They stayed baked in that mud cake for several weeks. Luckily the mud was so thick that there was plenty of moisture, for the shut-ins to live upon, and they burst their way out of their prisons none the worse for their experience and lived long and were happy so far as I know. Grandfather did say, though, that ... grandfather told him that he thought never would he get the cramps out of his back nor find his 'pond legs' after he did pry his way loose!"

New Wet League Formed At Albany

(International News Service)

ALBANY, N. Y., July 22—New York has a new organization aimed at prohibition.

It was incorporated by the secretary of the state as "The National Constitutional Liberty League of America."

Assemblyman Louis A. Cuvillier, New York City Democrat, and one of the chief foes of prohibition in the state legislature, is the prime mover behind the new organization. Cuvillier sponsored the bill in 1923 which brought about the repeal of the state prohibition enforcement law.

The purpose of the organization, as set forth in the incorporation papers:

"To secure cooperation of the legislatures of the various states to petition congress to call a national constitutional convention to repeal or modify the 18th amendment.

"To advocate the modification or repeal of national and various state prohibition acts.

"To advocate temperance in opposition to prohibition.

"To publish articles with relation to repeal or modification of the prohibition law of the nation and the various states."

America-Japan Trade Booming Since Big War

Five-Fold Increase Is Disclosed In Department Of Commerce Report

Last Year U. S. Took 42 Per Cent Of All Exports From Flowery Kingdom

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The remarkable growth of trade between Japan and the United States since the world war is reflected in statistics just made public by the department of commerce.

Exports from the United States to Japan have increased more than five fold since 1913 while exports from Japan to the United States have more than quadrupled in the same interval.

The ratio of this trade in 1913 was approximately 3 to 2 in Japan's favor.

Increased Demand.

Increasing demand for American products in Japan, however, has shifted the ratio now to a little less than 4 to 3. At the present rate of increase, the trade between the two countries promises to strike an even balance within another two or three years.

In 1913 the United States shipped $61,000,000 of merchandise to Japan and received $92,000,000 from that country. In 1926 Japan purchased approximately $320,000,000 and sold the United States $404,000,000.

Japan's purchases in 1926 were $47,000,000 greater than in 1925, while the United States last year took $8,000,000 less of Japanese goods than the year preceding. Thus the balance of trade against the United States and in favor of Japan decreased by $55,000,000 in the year, dropping from $140,000,000 to $85,000,000.

Best Customer.

The growing importance of Japan's trade with the United States as compared with its total volume of foreign commerce is reflected in the fact that last year the United States took 42 per cent of all of Japan's exports as against 29 per cent in 1913. The United States supplied 28 per cent of her total imports last year as compared with only 16 per cent in 1913.

Japan's export trade to the United States, the statistics show, is more than double that to China and imports from the United States more than three times the Chinese volume. China ranks second in Japan's foreign trade.

Star Of Wales Lodge To Meet

Session To Be Held On Saturday Evening; Other Welsh News Notes

The meeting of the Star of Wales lodge, No. 60, true Ivorites of America, will be held next Saturday evening, July 23, at 7:30 o'clock at the Emmanuel Baptist church. The officers who were not present for last week's installation will be installed at this meeting. Some preparation will be made at this time for the coming convention of the order, which will be held at the city of Utica, N. Y., during the second week of August. Henry T. Jones of Waldo street will be the local delegate and Griffith Thomas of Park avenue will attend as the honorable secretary of the order.

Other Notes

John Evans of the Cash Buyers store has recovered sufficiently from his last illness to be able to be at the store once more. He had a very severe attack and the physician was called just in time.

A meeting was held this week at Rhondda Valley, South Wales, to announce the National singing festival for the year 1928, which will be held at Treorcy, Rhondda Valley, South Wales. Here they appointed the secretary for the grand affair. His name is Telby Jones Treorcy, one of the best Welshmen of Wales.

Rev. and Mrs. J. Cradoc Owens have left for Youngstown, Ohio, where he will occupy the pulpit of the Elm street Congregational church, next Sunday, July 24. Rev. Owens made a wonderful impression on his audience. While preaching at the 1st Congregational church on last Wednesday evening, July 20, he proved himself a great master of the occasion, a man of knowledge and deliverance. Preaching the true gospel as it is in Jesus Christ and the singing of the grand old Welsh hymns in the grand old Welsh style were an inspiration. Mrs. Owens also made herself very familiar with the ladies of the church and both of them made a very sweet impression on the minds and hearts of Mr. and Mrs. David T. Evans while they were staying under their care at their home on South Mercer street. They left here with the best wishes of the people.

A great many Welsh people have gone over to Wales this summer. Most of them are North Wales people, from the United States and other countries. They are over there for the National singing festival of Wales. There are but a few of the South Wales people in attendance. Among the latter are Mrs. Lewis J. Lewis of Wildwood avenue and Mrs. Brinley Hughes of Cunningham avenue. They are having the best time of their lives.

The friends of Rev. R. E. Williams of Youngstown, Ohio, were very sorry to hear that he is resigning the pastorate of the Wilson avenue Baptist church. He has been pastor of the church for many years and is well known in this city. At one time the Emmanuel Baptist church of this city considered calling him as their pastor. Rev. Williams is a powerful preacher and a great worker in the vineyard of the master. While at Youngstown he held a summer school at the church each year and invited all nationalities to attend.

Rev. W. T. Holmes of Cleveland, Ohio, an old veteran of the Welsh pulpit of the United States, is visiting our city and attended the preaching service of Rev. J. Cradoc Owens at the Congregational church on Wednesday evening. He was well received by all those present. He is well thought of as a preacher and man by the Welsh people of the United States on account of his true christian life.

Mrs. Katherine Williams, mother of Christi and Ben Williams of Woodlawn and former resident of this city, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Francis and family on Highland avenue. Mrs. Williams also was at the preaching service of Rev. Owens.

Put Car In Condition Before Starting Trip

Almost every day an auto party is seen boarding a train forced by the breakdown of their auto to finish their trip by rail. And often some of the members carry their arms in slings or have bandaged heads on account of the accident to their car. Many of these accidents are caused by the owner of the car not having it put in condition before starting on the trip.

It is well to put your car in first class condition while still at home where your garage man understands your car and will do a good job, than to have to depend on any roadside mechanic who may not have the ability he claims or is more liable to overcharge you than your local man.

Not to mention the great inconvenience and danger to life and limb caused by traveling in a car in poor condition.

To Restore Old Schedule On Youngstown Line

Cars for Youngstown will again leave New Castle on the hour, instead of the half hour, beginning Saturday. Announcement to this effect was made today by the Penn-Ohio system when it stated that the former schedule of operation would be restored.

A week ago a new schedule went into effect whereby the cars left New Castle every hour at 30 minutes after the hour. Effective Saturday, however, the old schedule will be restored and cars again will leave New Castle on the hour.

In the daily air passenger service recently inaugurated between Seattle and Portland, the demand for reservations is such that they must be made several days in advance.

Former Crown Prince Carol Is Now Remorseful

By WILLIAM P. CARNEY.
International News Service Staff Correspondent

International News Service Copyright, 1927

PARIS, July 22.—Former Crown Prince Carol of Roumania, is "the man who would be king."

Tardy realization of his previous follies have succeeded Carol's genuine grief of two days over the death of his father, King Ferdinand.

Carol is grieving today because he threw away the crown. Until today in numerous long talks with the former Crown Prince, the correspondents always addressed him as "Your Highness." When the International News Service Correspondent was received by Carol this morning he unsuspectingly used the same greeting.

Carol cast a side glance at the correspondent and said nothing. After a strained silence, Mme. Lupescu, the beautiful, red haired Roumanian woman with whom Carol has been living in Neuilly, made the correcting remark:

"It is His Majesty, please."

Carol seemed relieved. His attitude indicated plainly that he considers himself a rightful king. He is disturbed slightly that the world does not recognize the fact.

Realizing that he lost the Roumanian throne through folly and his love for Mme. Lupescu, Carol, for the first time, seems annoyed slightly by her presence. Evidently he realizes how incongruous it was that she should be at his side when he heard the news of his father's death.

The former crown prince has to admit himself that Mme. Lupescu's presence embarrasses his family in their communications with him. On the other hand, Mme. Lupescu apparently fails to notice the change in Carol. But she is overawed by the possibility that her lover may mount the throne of the biggest kingdom in the Balkans. Evidently she does not stop to think what her own position would be if this happened.

It would not be surprising, Carol's friends declare, if, in his effort to be dignified and show a kingly demeanor, and to prepare himself for a possible return to Roumania, Carol deserted his beautiful, red haired companion, who accompanied him to Paris from Roumania.

Police May Prevent Pole Sitting Stunt

AKRON, O., July 22.—Unless police interfere, a youth hired by the proprietor of a motion picture theatre here will start a "flag pole sitting" atop the Odd Fellows' building on S. Main near Mill street, it was announced by Ike Friedman, manager of the theatre.

Police action may be invoked to prevent the "sitting", Councilman Ed Rose indicated last night. He said Police Captain Fred Deisz visited the scene of the proposed venture late yesterday.

"I object to anyone attempting to sit on a flag pole so situated that he might kill or injure a number of others if he fell," Rose said.

The first Y. M. C. A. summer camp was established in 1885, at Orange Lake, N. Y.

Says Science Has No Accurate Definition To Give For Life

(International News Service)

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., July 22.—Science has no accurate definition of life, Dr. J. C. Drummond of the University of London told the institute of chemistry of the American Chemical society here today.

Dr. Drummond said there were certain phenomena, such as growth, assimilation, respiration, reproduction and movement that, collectively, distinguish the living organism, as it is understood today, from the inert systems. But, he said, after centuries of human thought, scientists must admit they have no definition which helps to clearly distinguish the living from the non-living system.

Dr. Drummond suggested that a solution to the problem may be found in chemical reactions.

Whatever definition is accepted, Drummond said, it is certain that the chief fact impressed on an observer viewing life is that all life processes are energy exchanges of a more or less complicated nature.

The scientist said there is a growing conviction in scientific circles that there is no gap between the living and non-living organism.

Club Men Hear Interesting Talk By New Castle Man

Plan Golf Tournament At Ambridge, And Organization Of Bridge Team In Club

ELLWOOD CITY, July 22.—Thirty-three members of the local Kiwanis club enjoyed an address by Attorney James A. Chambers of New Castle last night at their regular weekly dinner-meeting in the dining room of the Methodist church.

Mr. Chambers selected as his topic "Cooperation" and began his interesting discourse with the dim dark ages of man, and claimed that the symbol of cooperation has appeared in all decades, but with more predominance in the present day, as man has realized that he must depend on this factor. His talk was well given and much enjoyed.

The members then planned a tournament with Ambridge in which ten golfers from the local club will battle a similar ten from the Ambridge club at Ambridge. There will be 15 prizes as an inducement to the reluctant ones.

A message was received from the Community Fresh Air camp thanking the club for a donation of records for the phonograph and asking the members to visit the camp. Next week the club members and their wives expect to visit Dick Victor's camp.

The members also planned the organization of a bridge team for inter-club games. W. H. Thomas is head of the committee on arrangements.

Pastors Declare War On Marriage Rite Salesmen

Methodist Pastors Association Passes Resolution Condemning Practice

(International News Service)

FORT WORTH, Texas, July 22.—The Methodist Pastors Association has declared war on the "marriage rite salesmen," who, incidentally are brethern of the cloth, in a resolution passed here a few days ago which called upon the county judge and county commissioners of Tarrant county to declare the practice a nuisance.

According to the wording of the resolution, the preachers who habitually solicit marriage rite business in the county courthouse would be barred from the building.

J. P. Donges, clerk in charge of the marriage license bureau, tells some amusing stories of the extremes to which the business is carried.

"Cut Rate Ceremony"

On one occasion, according to Donges, a Methodist minister and his wife, who had visited the office on other business, were accosted with the offer of a cut rate "ceremony" by one of the preachers who make it a practice to solicit couples there.

County Clerk Hollis, who states that two ministers spend practically the entire day in the courthouse, not far from the county clerk's office door, declares:

"It is getting to be a nuisance, and couples who come here to get a marriage license are badgered by one or both preachers who make it a business of uniting couples in marriage up here.

"I recall one instance in which two preachers were on opposite sides of the couple. One was offering to perform the marriage for $2.50, while the other was outbidding him at $2.00 flat."

Put Preachers Out

Hollis declared that he ordered the ministers to remain outside the office and not solict anybody inside. They did, he said, but one of them kept his eye to a crack in the door while couples were inside.

"We pasted a newspaper over the crack," Hollis said, "but he stood outside one of the windows. We put paper over that, but had to take it down because the weather was so warm."

Rev. W. B. Jordon, pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church at Sunset, in a statement defending his right to solicit marriages at the court house, declared he would discontinue the practice if anybody could show him he was "violating the laws of God and man."

Rev. Jordan explained that he only makes about $20 per month as pastor of his congregation, but his salary has been nicely augmented by the marriage fees which sometimes run as high as $53 a week.

Merchant Revives Unused State Law

(International News Service)

LEWISTOWN, Pa., July 22.—The status of scores of merchandising firms in central Pennsylvania is placed in a questionable light as the result of action brought here by Samuel Bernstein, a shoe merchant, against Russell Glass, a competitor.

Bernstein brought action against Glass under a state law which prohibits individuals from doing business under assumed names without being incorporated or filing the true and trade names with the secretary of the commonwealth.

The law, long forgotten in this vicinity, may strike many other firms, it is feared.

Carl Zeigler of Wayne avenue has accepted a position with the Jones-Laughlin Steel company in Woodlawn.

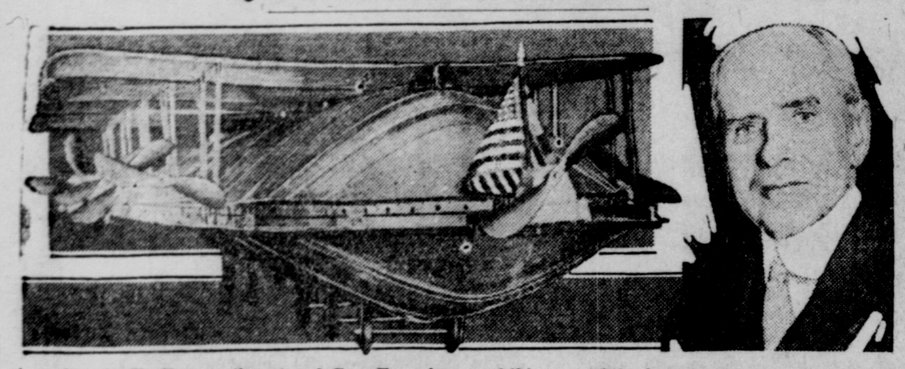
Dirigible And Plane To Be Combined In Projected Leviathan Of The Air



Claude H. Freese (inset), of San Francisco, exhibits an eight-foot model of a huge air liner he hopes to construct. It is to combine airplane and dirigible principles, and is to be capable of carrying 500 passengers.

By THOMAS MANN
International Illustrated News Staff Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO (I-I-N Special), July 22—A dirigible airplane, capable of carrying 500 passengers!

That's the conception of Claude H. Freese, San Francisco designer, formerly with the Zeppelin Company. He has constructed and is testing a model of his giant air liner, which he hopes to have under construction within a short time.

The central part of the full-size ship is to consist of a duraluminum bag, 786 feet long and 144 feet in diameter at its widest point. This will give the rigid bag a gas capacity of 4,500,000 cubic feet, an enormous lifting power.

From the central part will stretch five sets of wings, each 200 feet long, giving a huge flying surface never reached before in airplane construction.

Five motors will drive the ship, giving it a maximum speed of about 150 miles an hour. So bouyant will be the liner that the speed can be cut down a few miles an hour, eliminating much of the danger in landing, and permitting the huge craft to land on a field only several times its own size.

Thirty tons of fuel may be carried in the hollow wings, giving the ship a cruising radius of 10,000 miles, according to the estimates made by Freese. There will be space for 500 passengers, oil, supplies, spare parts. There will be sleeping quarters, dining rooms, and recreation facilities.

The added weight of engines and wings will make the craft slightly heavier than air. This will permit it to be under full control at all times, and will make it less a plaything of winds and storms than an ordinary dirigible. The ship, however, is to be lighter than water, and of such construction to enable it to ride out a severe storm on the sea.

Freese's design has not received Army and Navy approval as yet, and while some experts pronounce it as "possible but not probable," tests on his eighty foot model have not proven the success of a full sized ship. Many difficulties are to be overcome before the Freese bird takes flight, but the designer is confident that he'll be able to take the air in his liner some day.

Too Many Radio Stations In U. S.

Federal Commission Is Seeking To Have Some Consolidated

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 22.—With 697 radio broadcasting stations on the air and interference still giving the listeners considerable trouble the Federal Radio commission has started a new campaign to encourage the consolidation of existing stations.

Virtually prevented from refusing licenses to existing stations which meet the requirements of the law through the impairment of property rights the commission sees no solution but to bring about a reduction of broadcasters through some unofficial means.

In addition to the existing stations more than 300 applications for new licenses are on file. The commission must consider these applications despite the fact that the 89 available wave lengths are so crowded to overflowing. This consideration will start in August when members of the commission return to Washington after a nation wide survey of the radio situation.

New Stations.

The commission anticipates that many of the applicants can make deals with others contemplating erection of new stations for consolidations. Commissioner H. A. Bellows suggested that the commission would permit the use of several call letters for any station. Thus the expense of maintenance could be divided among several owners which would get the benefit of the advertising arising from operation without overcrowding the air.

Officials said that there is some tendency in the direction of consolidation although as yet the movement has not taken sufficient momentum to be the means of material assistance in eliminating interference.

Applicants for licenses to operate new stations have been sent the following letter by the commission:

"Receipt of your application for a construction permit to erect a new radio broadcasting station is acknowledged, but the application is being held for the later attention of the commission after it has obtained experience with this new allocation of all existing stations now under careful study.

"As soon as experience has shown that the new allocation is fully adequate for present stations, the commission will consider the possibility of fitting in additional new stations.

Renting Stations.

"Meanwhile your attention is directed to the unanimous attitude of the commission that in territories already served with radio, the construction of additional broadcasting stations should be discouraged in every way—this is in the public interest.

"As you must be aware there is already a great shortage of radio channels in every section of the country with the consequent improbability of securing adequate channels for a new station when finished. The commissioners are in each case recommending that persons contemplating building a new station first investigate the possibility of utilizing time on some existing local or nearby station.

"Considerable economy can be effected by renting time from or purchasing an interest in an existing station as compared with building a new one. When the existing station is not adequate for the new purposes it usually follows that with additional resources competent staff and equipment the local station can be put on a new plane of performance."

Playground In Roaring Third

Change Is Noted In Notable Precinct In Cleveland, Ohio

(International News Service)

CLEVELAND, July 22.—Cleveland's "roaring third" precinct, scene of vendetta slayings, bootleg wars, and every crime on the catalogue, is to have the finest playground and recreation center for children in the country.

Frank S. Harmon, city park director, announces that work will start soon on the new community center and that he will ask the city council to appropriate a half-million dollars to make it the model park of its kind in the world.

Present to City

The property to be developed was formerly owned by a Jewish orphanage. The Van Sweringen brothers, railroad magnates, purchased it and gave it to the city. Under an agreement with the orphanage trustees, however none of the present buildings can be torn down or altered until 1929.

Work is to begin on a wading pool within a few days. Meanwhile a survey of other recreational centers in all parts of the country is being made in order that the best and most modern ideas may be obtained in developing the local center.

To Have Auditorium.

In 1929 Harmon hopes to begin work on an auditorium, gymnasium and indoor swimming pool. He also plans to have an outdoor swimming pool and facilities for skating and coasting in the winter.

The fact that the park is to be built in the heart of the city's crime district is not expected to interfere with the success of the project. On the contrary Harmon believes the playground will be better attended and more appreciated there than elsewhere and that eventually it will go a long way towards bettering conditions in the notorious "roaring third."

Hundreds Hear Report Of Dempsey-Sharkey Battle At News Office

Hundreds of persons were packed in the street and locality adjacent to The News Office on North Mercer street last night, when the Sharkey-Dempsey battle was megaphoned from the building.

Long before the main bout was scheduled, fans began assembling at The News office, and before the hour when the two fighters entered the ring, the section was massed with people. As the fight progressed the crowd grew until there were hundreds packed in the vicinity of The News.

Radio reception for the fight last night was not good, there being a large amount of static in the air and many abandoned the radio, and came to The News office to get the results.

The radio was tried at The News for a moment or two, but it was soon found that atmospheric conditions were bad, and a shift was quickly made to the megaphone method. Account of the fight blow by blow, as it came to the News over a special telegraph wire, was given to the crowd by Ed Fritz, News Sport editor, and from the response that came from the crowd Eddie did a good job of it.

Evidently it was a Dempsey crowd, for the roars of approval that came into the News office from the throats of hundreds was loudest when Dempsey was socking them home.

Hundreds of telephone calls were answered at the News during and after the fight.

California Is Seeking Thrill

Longest Race By Air Is Scheduled For August 12

By THOMAS R. CURRAN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22—The longest races by water and land have been staged in California during the last six months. California is now preparing for the worlds' longest race by air—the $35,000 Dole flight from the mainland to Honolulu.

The world's longest water race was won by 17-year-old George Young last January. Outlasting twenty or more older and more experienced swimmers, the stocky Canadian boy fought through a kelp bed near shore to finish a 20-mile swim and to win a $25,000 prize. He was the only entrant to complete the cold and choppy swim from the island of Catalina to the mainland.

A race across Catalina channel has since been made in rowboats. An Australian sculler won a $2,000 prize offered for this event. These two races—the marathon swim and rowboat grind—give the marathon water honors to California.

Other Marathons

Thirteen Indian runners last month started out from San Francisco on a 480-mile marathon run to Grant's Pass, Ore. Mad Bull, a Karook, member of a tribe that boasts of its ability to run down deer, won the exhausting grind in seven and one-half days. The orthodox marathon is a fraction over 26 miles. Thus California claimed the world's longest race on land.

Now the interest of aviation the world over centers in history's longest air race from California to Honolulu. James Dole, a Hawaiian planter, has posted a prize of $25,000 to the first flyer reaching Wheeler Field, Schofield barracks, just outside Honolulu. The second flyer to land will get $10,000.

The starting flag will be dropped at noon, on Aungust 12. Twenty or more flyers are expected to soar away on the 2,400 mile race to the tiny Hawaiian group in mid-Pacific.

The flight was made by the army pilots, Lieuts. Lester Maitland and Albert Hegenberger late last month. Their successful hop, however, has not detracted interest from the competition for the Dole purse.

Shoot At Bull's Eye

The flyers will be shooting at a tiny expanse of land—320 miles wide—and furthermore, they will be racing their motors to get there first. The elements of great hazard and thrilling contest will make the Dole air derby a great sporting event.

If twenty airmen actually hop off to risk their lives and planes in the Dole contest and forty-two flyers have already declared their intention of competing—even the most sanguine air officials fear loss of life. There is no land in the 2,400 miles between the Farallon group, 20 miles off the Golden Gate, and the Hawaiian islands themselves. Then, again if the flyers miss their Hawaiian objective, because of fog or incorrect navagating, they will be adrift on a vast expanse of sea with no hope of reaching land.

Shoestring Line Saves Two Boys

(International News Service)

LANCASTER, Pa., July 22.—Two youths today owed their lives to a slender lifeline fashioned out of shoestrings at Elizabethtown near here.

One of the boys, Adam Himmelsbach, 11, tumbled into the Elizabethtown reservoir while trying to catch a frog and a companion, whose name was not learned, plunged in after him. He ws able to bring Himmelsbach to the side of the reservoir but both boys were too exhausted to clamber up its slippery sides.

Other boys in the group, unable to find a rope, hurriedly fashioned a life line from their shoestrings and dropping one end over the side managed to pull Himmelsbach to safety, the other boy clinging to Himmelsbach's legs.

Socialists Disband In Indiana County

(International News Service)

INDIANA, Pa., July 22. — The Socialist party, as far as Indiana county is concerned, has ceased to exist. A letter from the chief of the election bureau at Harrisburg informed the county election board here that 5 per cent of the votes cast at the last election had to be on the Socialist ticket, to enable the party to vote at the next election. Only 4 per cent of the votes cast here last time were for the Socialist candidates.

ATTACKS WEEVIL FROM AIR

Cotton farmers of Nueces county, Tex., have been aided in their fight against the boll weevil by Orval Dockery, 20, above, Corpus Christi aviator, who has just completed the dusting of more than 50,000 acres of cotton from the air. Fritz Hoefner, county agricultural agent has estimated that Dockery has saved the farmers at least $100,000 by his work. No estimate has been made of the number of dead boll weevils.

Nine Year Old Youth Misses His Train Here

A nine-year old boy, George Lyons, traveling with his aunt from Grand Rapids to New York wandered into the rear pullman of the Chicago-New York train of the Pennsylvania Railroad this morning and when this car, being a New Castle Sleeper, was cut off at Lawrence Junction, the boy was left while his aunt continued on her way.

The boy told officials that he went from his car to that in the rear that he might view the scene stretching out to the rear and supposed that the switching at the Junction was only a part of the trip while his aunt and sister apparently thought he still was with them.

As soon as it was found out about the mistake, the aunt, Miss Alice Nichols was reached by the railroad officials and she will await the boy in Pittsburgh. The boy was put in charge of conductor Dunlevey of the next train to Pittsburgh who will see that he reaches his people safely.

J. S. Hanrahan, divisional operator of the Pennsylvania railroad took charge of the boy while in New Castle. Asking if he had his breakfast and receiving a negative reply the boy was conducted to the Leslie hotel where Mr. Hanrahan ordered a breakfast for him. Mr. Hanrahan said that the boy although only nine seemed capable to taking care of himself and finishing his breakfast was paying the cashier when the official said that he would settle for his breakfast as the lad might have need of his change before he reached his aunt.

The lad seemed to be little concerned about the incident and visited with the men freely telling how his father was a maker of Chrysler automobiles in Detroit. We imagine that his aunt was much more concerned when she discovered that he was missing than the lad ever was.

The objection to a night club is that the festivities are still going good when it's time to shave again.

Labor Conditions Little Improved Statements Show

Building Improves In Pittsburgh District; Unskilled Labor At Surplus

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 22.—Reports of the employment offices thruout the state made public by Charles A. Waters, secretary of labor and industry, indicate but little improvement in industrial conditions.

Railroads are beginning to feel continued reduction in most lines of production. The railroads have done but little outside of hiring, even for labor, having thousands of regular employes on the furloughed list.

Building and construction activities were reported as slightly improved in Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Allentown. In other cities, however, conditions were said to be far below normal for this season of the year. The Erie office reported that the volume of building permits for the first week in July was the lowest for any seven-day period in the past five years.

Practically all of the offices continue to report large surpluses of unskilled and semi-skilled workers. Few employers have been registered at the employment offices because of the large number of men who apply daily at all projects.

Mines, both bituminous and anthracite, are working on subnormal summer schedules. Because of strike conditions in the bituminous field the entire situation is reported as very unstable.

Wholesale and retail lines, always quick to feel considerable unemployment, were reported as furloughing additional workers and doing practically no hiring.

All of the offices report a deluge of applications for work from truck drivers. The majority of them, the reports said, do not want to accept other work and are difficult to place because of the few openings available.

Cotton goods manufacturers reported some increase in the demand for help but the majority of the silk mills have been affected by the late arrival of warm weather and the resultant decrease in the demand for such goods.

Little perceptible demand for workers was reported in the metal and metal products industries. The majority of the mills are operating on little more than half of full time schedules.

Believe Corn Borer Battle Is Success

Actual Results Here Will Not Be Known Until August Says McCulloch

According to County Farm Agent H. R. McCulloch, the effect of the campaign recently waged against the European corn borer will not be known for some time, probably during the first part of August. He says that he is certain that the campaign has done much to exterminate the pest, but at the present time he cannot tell how great the effect was.

"The farmers did their best to rid the corn fields of this borer which laid waste the corn fields of Canada. They were given certain regulations to abide by, informing them what to do and the like. Most of the farmers obeyed these and did what they were asked to do," McCulloch stated. "Their work was of great value."

Doing Best To Remedy Conditions

"We are doing everything humans can do to obviate the situation" said Councilman Tyler to colleagues in session when Attorney Robert Aiken representing M. J. Scanlon, Seventh ward submitted a letter relative to conditions at the sewage disposal plant. Tyler added that he believes the condition complained of will be alleviated.

SHORT ROMANCES OF EVERYDAY LIFE

Precious Possessions

By Claire Wesson

BOTH her own perturbed feelings and the decided click of Mack's receiver as he slammed it down on the other end of the line told Hazel that she was not doing right. She turned her refusal over and over in her mind as she sat there, the dim 6 o'clock light of early Winter making it almost impossible to see the traced pattern of the stamped scarf in her lap.

"Well, Hazel, you're too busy to go to a dance," she told herself, viciously jabbing her needle into a French knot. "Besides, you're doing all this for him, and if he's so selfish as not to appreciate it, it's not your fault."

But she was restless. She folded up the scarf, and went to her room to pore over the hordes of beautiful things which filled her "hope chest," all the work of her tireless, loving hands. Her home was going to be perfect—hers and Mack's—and with this determination firm in her mind, she worked early and late on dainty linens. She allowed herself very little time to eat. Sundays alone she gave to Mack, for she would not dare touch a needle on Sundays. On that day she was her own cheerful, happy little self, trotting obediently at his side to church, driving with him, calling with him.

After supper her mother warned her.

"You're getting bleary-eyed over all that sewing," she said, herself busy with the latest novel, her neat little feet resting comfortably on the fender before the living-room fire. "You'll have all the time in the world for that after you get married. Goodness, if I were Mack, I'd go to that dance tonight with another girl. I would so, I wouldn't be bothered taking 'No' constantly for my answer to everything I invited my girl to. Sometimes I wish the old stuff would burn, or that somebody would steal it, or something."

Mrs. Bailey reached for an apple, returned to her novel, and chewed contentedly. Marriage had given her all she desired, and she showed it in every line of her little, plump, brisk figure, and in every fleeting expression of her pretty face. Margaret Bailey was 44, but nobody would have taken her for a day over 38. Her husband adored her, and so, for that matter, did her two children. Among the most prominent of the pictures that adorned her son Bob's college room, were those of his "little sister-mother."

Hazel vouchsafed no answer to her mother's rebuke. Her hands trembled ever so slightly over her sewing. She did want to finish that scarf before Saturday. It went with the set for their bedroom. Tonight, however, the blue and rose of the silk hurt her eyes. In her mind's eye she had a picture of Mack going to the dance with another girl. Almira, for instance. Mack used to go with Almira before he had really known Hazel. She glanced at her watch. Half past 8! Should she call him up and say she would go? Stitch, stitch, stitch! No, she must finish the set. Her thread knotted. She struggled fiercely to untangle it, finally cutting it with an angry little jerk.

What was the matter with her? She glanced over at her mother placidly reading and chewing. She would find no sympathy there. She rose with a muttered "G'night," and fled to her room. Her mother smiled, a little grimly, to herself, and there were other thoughts in her head besides the novel.

Hazel looked at herself carefully in the mirror the next morning before she set off to the office. She was losing her color. Suppose she should lose her vitality, and her good looks! Suppose Mack learned to like rosy-cheeked Almira better than he liked her! Suppose, well suppose lots of things. Lovingly she took a long, lingering look at the things in her chest, locking it carefully before she left the room.

The day dragged. Hazel's head was heavy. So, indeed, was her heart, Mack had failed to call her up. He had called her up every day since he had given her the ring. During her lunch hour she worked, feverishly on her scarf. She felt that she could not eat. She must have the set done before Sunday. There were only a few petals on the embroidery now.

Suppose Mack had taken Almira to the dance last night! Suppose he had called Almira at her office! She recalled the numberless times she had told Mack she was too busy or too tired to go to the movies, to a dance, to a "show in town." Her mother was right. But, then, she just had to get linen and household furnishings for their little home, and Mack was so urgent about getting married in a hurry. They could not afford to buy just what she wanted, and they must have the best.

When she got home that night her mother met her at the door, a look of consternation on her usually placid face.

"Burglars, Hazel," she gasped, "and they've taken about everything. I was only out for a couple of hours, and when I came in all the bureau drawers were emptied on the floor. They've taken everything but the silver. Everything in your room's about cleaned out—"

"My chest!" screamed Hazel, running upstairs two steps at the time.

Her fears were well grounded. Everything was gone. Her room was in a chaos. Every sacred article in her chest had been ruthlessly taken.

Ding-a-ling. The telephone.

It was Mack. At the hopeless dejection in Hazel's voice, Mack did not stop to talk.

In five minutes she was weeping the whole story out on his broad shoulder before the living room fire.

"I'll never make another thing as long as I live," she sobbed. "All our beautiful things gone. Mack. I haven't even a sheet for you to sleep on."

"Don't need 'em, honey," he remarked irrelevantly into her hair. "I'll sleep on the bed springs. I'll roll up in a blanket. I won't sleep at all. All I want is just you, beautiful and well and strong. What do we care?"

"But my beautiful table-linens, with all those darling monograms," she wailed.

"I'd just as soon eat off the oil-cloth with you sitting across the table."

"Oh, Mack!"

"Well, I would," he insisted, "and tomorrow's Saturday, and we're going riding all afternoon, and we're going to Chinatown for supper, and we're going to a show in the evening, aren't we? Unless, of course, you've something else to do."

"No, I haven't a single thing."

"Well, and Wednesday we're getting married,—unless you've something you want to finish."

So Wednesday it was. And when the knot had been tied, and the guests were waiting for the newlyweds to flee. Hazel was led into her own room by her mother and her newly-made husband. There before her eyes was her open chest, and in it were all her stolen treasures. she looked into her mother's tear-dimmed but happy eyes, and a great understanding of the wisdom of mothers came to her.

"Mother!" she cried.

"It was the only day," her mother said. "If I hadn't you would be sitting here tonight wearing your eyes out on a pillow-slip or something, wearing your heart out for Mack, and wearing out Mack's patience."

"You'll have plenty of time for that kind of stuff," whispered Mack; "plenty of time and plenty of occasions, little wife. I'll see that you do."

Empty Hands

By Margaret Taylor

IT was over at last, and Henry Braye lifted his glance to Mary Alton's—a suffering, sorrowful look that sought and found steadiness in her steadiness.

He had never meant to hurt her. He had thought nothing on earth could shake his love for Mary. When the thing had become too strong for him, he had come to tell her as humbly and straightforwardly as a man may.

She had listened silently, her slim, strong hands resting on the arm of her chair. Once, she moved to clasp them loosely in her lap. They were not tense—only firm and quiet. Braye found himself watching them while he told his broken story. They were capable, well-kept hands, made for service and already showing that service had been given. Edith's hands were beautiful in a quite different way.

"I shall not deny that it is a blow, Henry," she said simply. "Though I had felt a difference in your letters. All I ask is that you will always be as honest and as merciful as you have been today."

She crossed the room to put the ring in his hand.

"Don't forget," she said. "I have the right to ask that, haven't I? Good-by, Henry, I hope you and Edith will be happy."

That was all. If Mary suffered, neither he nor any other knew it. It troubled him as the years went by that she did not marry. His first visit to the home town after his own marriage laid the ghost of that worry.

Edith and Mary liked each other too—beautiful Edith whom Braye delighted to surround with all the luxury and ease he could command, and busy Mary whose face was an index to a life well lived.

Annoyed at times by a mysteriously recurring memory, Braye sought to crush it down. It was long before he learned that certain memories are good—those memories that hold us to our best even while they hurt.

Barclay's business proposition sounded attractive. True, there was a point of honor involved, yet there was also every prospect of safety and rich profit. Braye's heart leaped at the thought of what he might do with half a million for Edith and the boy. Acceptance was trembling on his tongue, when Barclay, in full tide of explanation, leaned forward, his hands on the arms of the office chair. The eyes of Braye's memory saw another pair of hands placed just so. By contrast Barclay's hands looked mean and sly. Braye blurted a curt refusal fearful lest, delaying, he should not be strong enough. There was a dew of perspiration on his forehead, so narrow had been the margin of escape.

The knob of the office door turned and a boy came in. He was obviously a college boy of the first or second year, his son and Edith's, Robert. Braye's first thought was one of apprehension. There must be something wrong for the boy to be home in term time.

"Bob! Is anything the matter?"

"Cordial greeting!" laughed the youth. "Little affair of suspension for joy riding and generally disgracing the alma mater."

Astonishment, pain, and anger showed in Braye's face. The boy swaggered into the chair Barclay had occupied and met his father's look with one of defiance and bravado. It might have fallen out differently if Braye's glance had not dropped to the brown, boyish hand that trembled on the arm of the chair. He leaned forward and covered it with one of his own. Down went the defiant head upon that fatherly hand, and Braye felt the hot tears of sorrow and humiliation. He and Bob would always be the closer for the hour that followed.

Edith met them at the door when they came in, and trailed Henry up stairs. Bob had already made his confession to his mother, so Braye felt that there must be something more, even after they had talked of the boy. Presently it came.

"Henry, there was a letter from Mother Braye today. Mary Alton is dead. She was caring for her sister's little sick children. She overworked and took cold. Pneumonia. Mother Braye said. It seems as the world could not spare Mary."

"I notice you never laugh at my funny stories."

"Of course not. I was brought up to show more respect to age."

Pikers, All of Them

By Phil Moore

"IT beats me!" Miss Pike turned dejectedly from the window; "I've tried every way under the sun to keep those youngsters from crossing my garden, and they will do it in spite of me."

Her niece looked up quickly from the sketch spread before her.

"Tried moral suasion, Aunt Lydia?"

"Moral suasion! I've talked, and begged, and lectured, and all but called the police, if that's what you call 'moral suasion.'"

The girl smiled. "Let me try my hand with these young savages," she suggested.

"You! Think they're goin' to pay attention to you, when they won't me. Laws, Marcia, you don't look more'n half-past-twelve years, yourself."

"Oh, very well, but—" Miss Pike shook her head dispairingly.

"If I'll guarantee to turn the trick, Aunt Lydia, will you promise to fall in with all my suggestions?"

"I 'spose so."

"It's a bargain!"

"Oh, Look who's here!"

The boys were half-way across the yard when the slight little figure in dainty pink muslin rose from behind the currant bushes.

"Halloo, boys,"—the tone was cordial, "what can I do for you?"

The boys turned expectantly to Timothy Martin, their acknowledged leader, who proved equal to the occasion.

"Aw, give us a curl," he retorted.

Young Martin looked a trifle crestfallen.

"How d'you know that's my name?" he flashed back, defiantly.

"Because I've heard Aunt Lydia—Miss Pike—speak of you so often. Thinks a good deal of you boys."

In what way Miss Pike thought of them, Marcia did not consider it necessary to explain.

"Humph! Who are you?"

"I'm her niece—Marcia Kendall. I'm to live here while I'm studying to be an artist."

"Do you know what an artist is?"

"Sure," came in ready chorus. "Fat, here, is an artist; he drew a sled up a hill, once." "Aw, Sub's a better artist than that he can draw his breath." "Aw, Mustard draws better'n either of 'em."

Marcia laughed, displaying pearly teeth, and numerous dimples.

"Listen, boys, I want to tell you something!" She raised her hand for silence. "This is a secret; you're good sports, and I know you won't tell. I want to paint a picture of this place to surprise Aunt Lydia. I need you fellows to help me out. Will you do it?"

"Sure! Paint Andy on the roof for a chimney that don't smoke."

"Say, Sam, stand over there and make a noise like a garage, and I'll shinny the rain-spout and pose for a crimson rambler."

"Listen, boys," cried Marcia, laughing. "There's just one way that you can help. Let me explain."

"All right; Curleylocks has the floor. Keep quiet, fellers. Shut up, I tell you!" Timothy Martin glared at his confederates, who quickly subsided into silence as Marcia continued:

"As I said before, Aunt Lydia likes you. She says you're about the squarest gamiest bunch of kiddies that ever happened." She lied glibly.

"She does?"

"Yes, but there's just one thing you do that worries her. You cross her garden. She takes more comfort in that garden than in anything else in the world. I guess. You see, she can't get out and have a good time the way we fellows can (the boys exchanged grins), although, believe me, she'd like nothing better. She's a good sport; she'll prove it some day.

"Now I want to ask you to stop cutting through here. A few steps farther don't mean much in your young lives, but a whole lot in Aunt Lydia's. Besides. I want to paint that garden at its best, so—look here, boys, you won't cross through any more, will you?" she finished, earnestly.

"Sure not." Martin winked knowingly at his companions, who in turn nudged one another, and vowed that nothing short of an earthquake could again carry them across that plot of ground.

The following morning, Aunt Lydia and Marcia, behind drawn curtains watched the group of incorrigibles, as they paused at the gate, and who, after a hurried survey of the house, tore across the garden, secure in the belief that they had been unobserved.

"Smarty had a party," quoted Aunt Lydia, triumphantly.

"You wait; I'm not through yet," boasted her niece. "And remember, you promised to agree to all my schemes."

For another week the trespassing continued. Miss Pike worried and dispaired, but Marcia kept her own counsel, and smiled.

Friday noon, the boys were about to make their usual "sprint," when they were hailed by Marcia, looking like a bit of garden herself, in her vivid organdie.

"Here a minute, boys."

Hesitantly, slowly, they followed their leader up the walk.

"Boys, I'm proud of you!" Had a bomb burst in their midst, they could not have been more surprised. "Yes," repeated Marcia, "we're proud of you! Aren't we Aunt Lydia?" as that lady appeared in the doorway, nodding vigorous assent.

"It is just one week," she continued, "since you promised you would not cross this garden, and not once have you forgotten your promise! Boys, Miss Pike appreciates the honorable part you have played. She knew all the time that you were a square bunch. And to show her appreciation, she asks you to come here tomorrow afternoon from three to five, for games, races, and all the ice cream that you can eat. What do you say?"

Dead silence. Then Timothy Martin raised a faltering voice: "Sure—we'll come—thank—thank you," followed by a subdued echo of thanks

And what a party! with chocolate cake, and pink and white cake, and three kinds of ice cream! And the contests! And didn't Miss Pike herself beat them all at quoits? And couldn't Miss Marcia throw a ball!

"Say, fellers," remarked Sam, as they closed the gate after giving three rousing cheers for their hostesses, "it's funny how everyone of us happened to get a prize for something. I wonder if—"

"Keep quiet! I've got somethin' to say!" Timothy wheeled and addressed his gang. "The first feller that crosses Miss Pike's garden gets his block knocked off! D'you hear that? Attention! Now take the oath:—'Never again, no more, so help me Bob!'"

Reaching for the Moon

By Clyde Weldon

STELLA lived with her old father at the edge of the town. His eyesight was very poor, hence his inability to work outside of his own home. But he depended on Stella and she realized it only too well. She also knew that the neighbors were saying unkind things about her and pretended she didn't care. Deep down in her heart she nursed them for their unjustness.

Stella worked as typist at the Cloverdale Iron Works and she certainly was clever at it. Persistent practice showed in the way her nimble fingers jumbled lightly over the keys.

Today had been unusually busy for Stella. She felt cramped from bending over the typewriter, and her head ached. What could she get for supper? Dad didn't care for cold meat and that was all she had. Well, she'd have to go to the store and get something.

As the whistle blew she covered up her typewriter, laid the neatly typed copies on Mr. Burrough's desk and walked out wearily.

Outside the door Stella almost collided with Jerry Cushing, assistant to Mr. Burroughs.

"Sorry, Miss Casavant, my fault." He smiled as he turned to go up the stairs.

Stella bit her lip as she continued her way. She had always liked Jerry and he was her ideal. He was polite and considerate. Whenever she did any copying for him he thanked her. He was the man forever in her dreams. She sighed as she realized that she was reaching too high for the moon . . .

She cleared the supper dishes and sewed on a made-over dress. Presently, having finished it, she tried it on.

As Stella stood in front of the mirror in the dyed black dress she shrugged her shoulders in disgust. What was the use of trying to look pretty when you didn't have anything to look pretty in? She couldn't remember when she had bought her last dress, it seemed so long ago. All she did was to make them over and over!

The black dress did look good on Stella, even then. Perhaps it was because it was plain, with just the high belt of dull blue. It showed up her slim little figure to advantage. With just a dab of powder and a dash of rouge she was beautiful.

The telephone rang.

"Miss Casavant? This is Mrs. Burroughs. My husband is out of town and there is a man by the name of Crouch who came from New York to see him. He must get the late train back to the city. There are some papers that he wants, and I wondered if you knew anything about it."

Stella said she knew about the papers and, as she had the keys to the office, she would see that he got them.

When she reached the office she saw a man standing at the foot of the stairs. He was watching her closely.

"Come right in, Mr. Crouch. I'll get them for you. Mr. Burroughs told me about them."

He followed her up the stairs and into the office. Stella turned on the light and turned to the man.

"Hello, Stella. Haven't seen you for a long time."

Stella uttered a stifled exclamation as she gazed at the man with horrified eyes.

"Jack, you—W-when did they let you out of jail?"

"Let me? Humph. They didn't. I just got out on my own hook. Just got to town tonight. Guess I'd better beat it before the coppers trace me. Gee. Never expected to see you, though."

He turned around and began inspecting the office.

"W-what are you looking for?"

"Nothing special. Just wondered if there was anything worth while." Then his eyes wandered casually to the safe. "Oh."

He walked toward it quickly and looked puzzled as he glanced it over.

"Say, kid, what's the combination?"

Stella was trembling. What could she do? She knew there was nobody else in the whole building. She also knew that this man was a desperate criminal. He had lived in her neighborhood up to the time of his imprisonment. He was serving a prison term for several robberies.

"Well, ain't you going to tell me?" He was leering at her closely.

She looked at him, then said clearly. "No." She wondered what he would do.

"Huh. You won't, eh?"

Stella remembered they had struggled and that he had twisted her arms until she thought she'd go crazy. Just as she was drifting into unconsciousness the door opened and someone entered.

When Stella came to she was lying on the couch and Jerry Cushing was kneeling beside her.

"Stella, dearest, are you all right? You're not hurt?"

"I-I'm all right. He-he didn't get anything?"

"No. Mrs. Burroughs called me right after she had called you. I met Mr. Crouch outside, and just as we were coming in two policemen came rushing up. We came up when we saw the lights. I'm so sorry, dear."

"I thought he was Mr. Crouch. It was so dark—I couldn't see."

Jerry took her home and told her to go to sleep and forget about it. She tried to sleep but couldn't. He had called her "dear." Why? Did it slip out unconsciously?

The next morning Stella's heart was beating faster than ever when she entered the office. Mr. Burroughs had not come. She began work immediately, but she couldn't set her mind on it. The mistakes. Everything went wrong. She snatched the copy she was making and tore it to bits.

"What's the matter, Stella?"

She turned around and Jerry was standing beside her.

"Oh," she said hopelessly, yet tremulously, "can't do anything."

"Then, don't dear. Mr. Burroughs won't be in, so we can take the day off. It's hot, anyway. Let's go out into the fresh air and have a jolly good time. We'll make a picnic of it. Besides, I've something very important to say to you, Stella."

Stella walked out of the office mechanically. She knew intuitively what he was going to say and she was happy. Her dreams were coming true. She had not reached too high for the moon.

He touched her gently and she tucked her arm in his. She walked out of the office into the clear sunshine and into a new life.

The Mysterious Miss Minn

By Monte Darrell

FROM behind the plate glass window upon which shone in golden letters a foot high the names of "Clay and Rand, Attorneys-at-Law," the junior partner watched the promenade of what he termed "a peach." This was the third afternoon that the vision had appeared.

In the olden tales he recalled things always happened in the third round.

Tom Rand watched a filmy blue scarf wave mockingly as it disappeared behind the shrubbery in the little park opposite. With a courteous glance at the senior partner, buried in the "Whereas's" of a legal document. Tom threw away seven-eighths of a perfectly good cigarette and slid into his coat.

As the siren who had unwittingly lured him thither came around a bend in the gravel walk, she nearly stumbled over the stooping form of a young man evidently engaged in search of something.

"Oh!"

"Pardon," said the young man, straightening. "Guess I can't find it."

"To bad," she murmured, sympathetically.

"Would you mind if I walked along with you a little way? I might find it, you know."

"I don't mind." Then she added, with a side-long glance: "You might find it but I doubt it."

Tom thought he saw a dimple, but a wind-tossed lock got mixed up with it somehow, and he wasn't sure. Assuming that he did, however, he laughed infectiously and, with a wave of his hand toward the plate glass window, introduced himself: "Second name—that's me."

Polite interest was his only reward. He received no enlightenment as to her identity. So they chatted and walked in the early spring sunshine, and never knew the wind was chill.

Other afternoons came and went, and the pleasant ones found Tom and his mystery girl in the park. She would not allow him to escort her home, nor did she give him any clue to her environment.

One of the green and gold days he became bold and asked her name.

"Miss Minn," came the answer, musically, from behind her fur collar.

Further emboldened, Tom requested, in best legal tones, "Given name, please."

"Mimi Minn."

Tom looked at her quizzically. "Sounds as if you had your mouth full of pins."

Whereupon Miss Minn drew herself up rather haughtily and went home.

When Mary Minster and her semi-invalid mother came to S—, Mary, having read in a Hollywood article that mysterious women were the vogue, resolved that she would be one of these unfathomable creatures. Mrs. Minster's sister, Molly, sent them boxes of her beautiful clothes, which lost none of their charm on Mary, and helped eke out a slender income. The bewitching Mary, although willing to help, was determined not to be a clock-puncher.

"I don't want to be here or there at a certain hour," she explained. "I am going to do a variety of things. There are lots of ways to earn money, but during some hour of every day I shall be Madame X—the object of surmise."

Her eyes sparkled with youthful enthusiasm. Her mother looked troubled but, not being very strong, and knowing Mary as she did, she did not argue.

The next day, after her austere leave-taking of Tom, Mary decided to find out whether he ever looked out of the window in the morning. With extreme care she arrayed herself in Aunt Mollie's latest shipment and set out for the park.

As she crossed a square, with her eyes on the traffic officer, a new and nervous driver slid into the middle of the street, regardless of signals. Miss Minn was directly in his path. Even a gentle bump from a twin-six is likely to be disastrous, and a curly bob and two slim, silk-clad legs shot down and out as the car came to a jarring stop. Almost simultaneously the officer, panic-stricken driver, and an excited young man bent over the much frightened girl.

"Mimi, oh, Mimi, are you hurt?"

"No-o-o. I guess not. Where's my hat?"

"Yes, you are, too. You're terribly hurt. You can't walk, can you? No, of course not! I'll take your case. I am this young lady's lawyer," he said with dignity turning to the slowly wilting driver. "Your name and address please? My card."

"I'll take this young lady home. Jerry" he added to the irate policeman.

"All right, Mr. Rand. Hope she's not hurt too bad."

"We will hope for the best" said Tom, lugubriously, and picking up the amazed Miss Minn, he deposited her with tender care in the seat of a long, low roadster.

"Why—I," she began.

"Don't talk till you are calmer. I saw the whole thing. Was on my way to the office and saw you before he struck you. Which way, dear?" he asked as they came to a cross street.

"Twenty-eight, Wilmot," she answered weakly.

"Is this car yours?" she demanded suddenly. "I thought you said you were a struggling young lawyer."

"Now, listen, I am young—and I do struggle, but I am not an orphan. My father gave me this car, and I took it from whence it came. I have not tried to deceive you—Mimi," he added, with a wicked twinkle.

Silence.

"Really, you know, you are my first case in every sense of the word," he went on softly.

"Since you are my attorney, I think, perhaps, I had better tell you that my name is Mary Minster. When I was little I used to call myself Mimi Minn, and it popped into my head the day you asked me my name.

"I did so want to be mysterious, and have you—everybody—wonder about me." Her voice faltered.

"Don't you know, Mary, that all girls are mysteries to us poor men?" He gently squeezed her arm.

"I wonder what your mother would say if she knew how backward you are in history?"

Pupil—"Oh my mother says she never learnt hist'ry and she's married, and Aunt Mary says she never learnt hist'ry and she's married and you did learn hist'ry and you ain't married."

NEW YORK, July 22.—United tes Army air officials are now ting out the first of what they pe will be a fleet of many veritable ing battleships for the U. S. Army service.

The big, all-metal bi-plane, de-ned to replace the present type of mber used by the army, is powered h two 600 horsepower Curtiss tors mounted on either side of the selage. It is named the Curtiss ndor.

The plane mounts six machine-ns, mounted in pairs, as follows: o in a turret in the "nose" or ex-me front of the fuselage, two each turrets behind each of the motors. is claimed the fire of the machine-ns can be centered on an opposing ane as near as a hundred feet away. In addition to the machine-guns, e big bomber will have room and pacity for carrying a ton of high-explosive aerial bombs.

The specifications call for a cruis-speed of 105 miles an hour, as mpared to 85 miles for the present e of bomber. The cruising radius will be 700 miles. The crew will number five.

One feature of the Condor is a seating arrangement whereby the members of the crew can replace one another in case of injury to one or more of them. The bomber sits just forward of the pilot in the cockpit, where he can take over the controls, in which event the gunner in the nose can come back and replace the bomber.

Jack Dempsey, Tuned Up To Minute, Stops "Boston Mauler" With Left To Jaw

Sharkey Tried To Swap Punches And Finish Was Pitiful; Was Great Fight

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
Sports Editor International News Service

NEW YORK, July 22.—They had two strikes on Babe Ruth and then he hit one over the fence.

The old, old story, ancient as sin itself, the tale of the hare and the tortoise, was repeated all over again at the Yankee Stadium last night when Jack Dempsey, the great killer of fistiana, added another pelt to the old thatch pole. He knocked Jack Sharkey, that painfully confident young man from Boston, colder than a frappe after 45 seconds of fighting in the seventh round, at a time when the tortoise seemed tottering on his last, palsied old legs and the hare was skimming over the landscape as only a hare can.

Sharkey Goes Out

They were just about to declare it no contest out of resigned pity and prepare the melancholy obituaries about the man who was compared with the man who wasn't, when suddenly out of nowhere Dempsey lashed away in a clinch with a left to the body and jaw and Sharkey was no more.

Yes, they have had two strikes on Ruth. Many a man, they say, was born that way, but it means nothing to Ruth, just as a few slaps on the side curtain mean nothing to Jack Dempsey.

For Dempsey, often compared to the tiger, might be old and broken and toothless but as long as a tiger breathes he is dangerous to human kind and so it is with the man who lives within the man who masqueredes under the synthetic polish and culture that is William Harrison Dempsey.

Remnant of Dempsey.

It seems like taking something from a citizen who has about everything today when I say that Sharkey lost the fight as much as Dempsey won it. This great hook—and—I—man could hardly go wrong against the remnant of a Dempsey that plodded doggedly about the ring last night. But the point is that Sharkey did go wrong, awfully, painfully wrong.

He thought he was a pretty good fighter and I am not convinced yet that he wasn't and isn't. But the pitcher who slips one to Babe Ruth in the groove just because George is two down and one to do is a sap of purest ray serene and you can take my word for it that Sharkey was a most sincere sap last night.

He had before him the spectacle that was presented at the Philadelphia stadium last September when Gene Tunney quite sensibly declined to meet Dempsey body to body and heave at it like a couple of longshoremen. Instead, he moved rapidly about in widening circles, making a stand only long enough to slap Dempsey about with quick, short punches and then went right away from there.

Sharkey Errs.

I don't say that Sharkey is a Tunney. But he certainly is not a Dempsey, a statement to which undoubtedly he will place his seal and hand today.

He ought to know it, anyhow, for if he don't know now, the truth is never for him. He had the superior speed but he refused to use it, being too vain to back away from the human killer.

It didn't seem to matter that Dempsey's legs were gone and that, in three rounds or less, they fold up of their own weariness. No, Sharkey was too arrogant for such a finish as that. He must finish Dempsey with his own hand and, in such a program, it was inevitable that one man or the other must go quickly. In such a game the odds were all with Dempsey and so Sharkey, of necessity, was elected. I hope he likes the office.

Of course, the question of Dempsey's left to the body had to come in for severe scrutiny and, in truth, it was low enough to deserve inquiry. It landed at or under the belt; not over it, in any case. But the writer is not particularly concerned with the punch in question. You can't foul a man with a punch on the jaw, and it was such a punch that finished Sharkey.

No Claim of Foul.

Further, there was no claim of foul in Sharkey's corner and the referee calmly went on with the tuneless ten, apparently serene in the belief that everything was as it should have been.

Anyhow, post mortems of that kind never won a prize fight. Hit them over the fence and, if the umpire says fair, it is so ordered even if you gather about until daylight and weep until your vests are sodden.

No, this fight is dead; long live the next one. And live long it will.

Dempsey and Tunney are set now to repeat their rampage of the rain, only this time they will play Chicago just by way of diversion, and for good measure.

No ballyhoo, no smoke up is needed. Dempsey is the greatest man before the public today. He is the darling of the galleries again, a man whom they trusted and whom they trusted not in vain.

Not many champions shorn of their title have come back to such an impressive gesture as Dempsey made last night. Willard did it against Floyd Johnson and then folded up against Luis Firpo. This may or may not be prophetic but I don't mind saying that I shudder to think what Tunney will do to the gasping, spavined Dempsey of the first six rounds last night.

But, then I picked Sharkey to win in ten rounds, so it is probable that no one cares particularly how much or how violently I may shudder in the future.

However, as I saw it, Dempsey kept charging in with the old aggressiveness and played to the body as viciously as of yore. Except for his painful lack of speed and stamina, he fought a typical Dempsey fight. It merely was unfortunate that Sharkey didn't get around to doing the same for himself.

The Knock-out

Round seven:

Dempsey came out for the seventh with both eyes in mourning. They exchanged lefts to the jaw. Sharkey missed a left hook and Dempsey brought up a left to the jaw in close.

Dempsey brought over a left hook to the jaw and Sharkey went down. They counted ten as a mere mechanical gesture. Sharkey was out.

Trip To California Planned By Dempsey

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 22.—Jack Dempsey will leave for his home in Los Angeles Sunday or Monday, to return East about the second week in August to resume training for his championship battle with Gene Tunney in September.

Leaving the Yankee Stadium last night, Dempsey went to Leo Flynn's home, only a few blocks up the grand concourse, and there put in a call for his wife, Estelle Taylor, in Los Angeles. After talking to her he sat up quite late receiving friends. Today he will move into a suite reserved for him at the Belmont.

If the championship fight is held in New York, Dempsey will go back to Saratoga Lake to train. Otherwise he will pitch his camp near the battleground selected.

Sharkey Plans Fishing Trip

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 22.—Jack Sharkey planned to motor to Boston today with his wife, starting from there on a fishing trip to Nova Scotia.

Mrs. Sharkey declared that she believed a lucky blow caused her husband's defeat, and said she was certain he would win next time.

Brief Summary Of Seven Rounds

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 22.—Following are the high lights of the Dempsey-Sharkey fight last night:

Round One—Dempsey went right after Sharkey from the start with a series of short rights to the body. Dempsey rushed Sharkey to the ropes and pounded him unmercifully with blows to the stomach and jaw, but Sharkey staged a counter rush and drove Dempsey against the ropes. Dempsey was badly hurt, but won the round because of his body blows.

Round Two—Dempsey again pounded Sharkey's mid-section. Two left hooks opened a cut over Dempsey's right eye. A hard right to the head hurt Dempsey, but he twice drove Sharkey against the ropes. Round even.

Round Three—Sharkey landed a dozen hard blows to Dempsey's jaw. Dempsey shot a right to Sharkey's jaw, but the former champion seemed tired. Sharkey slipped in his corner as the bell rang. Sharkey's round.

Round Four—Dempsey walloped Sharkey's ribs almost at will. They stood toe-to-toe and slugged and Sharkey was hurt badly by a left hook to the jaw. A stiff left to the jaw did not bother Dempsey. Dempsey's round.

Round Five—Sharkey scored repeatedly in this round. He shelled Dempsey's head and jaw, with occasional body blows. Dempsey was bleeding, but never stopped coming in, taking three punches to land one. Sharkey landed six blows in succession to the body and chin. Sharkey's round.

Round Six—One of Sharkey's rights to the head rocked Dempsey. The ex-champ was tired but still tough. The bout slowed down considerably. Sharkey nailed Dempsey with a stiff right uppercut, the hardest punch yet. Then Dempsey delivered a series of rights and lefts to the body which began to take effect on Sharkey. Sharkey's round.

Round Seven — Sharkey drove Dempsey to the center of the ring with a shower of lefts and rights in close. Dempsey staggered Sharkey with a terrific right to the pit of the stomach, on or below the waistline. Cries of "foul" were heard as Sharkey doubled up in agony. As Sharkey turned toward the referee to protest, Dempsey clipped him with a terrific left to the chin and Sharkey fell to his knee and then collapsed with his forehead against the floor. He was counted out.

What Fighters Have To Say

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 22.—Jack Sharkey said: "Dempsey won that fight by hitting me a foul blow. While I was protesting he clipped me on the chin and put me down. I was sure they would give me the fight and I will never get over the surprise I felt when they gave it to Dempsey."

Jack Dempsey said: "It was a fair blow so far as I remember. It started and landed fair. While Sharkey was kicking to the referee I quit but when the referee said to continue the fight, I hooked a short one to the liver and clipped one to the chin and Sharkey went down for the count. Sharkey is a great fighter and a game fellow. But I was absolutely certain I would win."

Dempsey Is Accorded Greater Reception Than When He Was Champ

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 22.—Evidence of public esteem he never knew when he was champion, and a better fighter than he is now, came to Jack Dempsey last night at the Yankee stadium in three tremendous waves of enthusiasm.

First was the demonstration that greeted the veteran as he climbed into the ring. It was a spontaneous cheer prolonged for several minutes.

The second outburst followed the ending of the count over Sharkey. It wasn't a cheer. The customers were too excited to join in any concerted jubilation. They just boiled over to create an uproar and from the crater of milling, twisting bodies at the ringside came a shower of straw hats to land on the canvas. Faces were queerly strained close up there under the strong lights, mouths were contorted into strange lines and the whites of pop-eyes gleamed under the powerful arcs.

That was the time when emotions ran riot.

A few moments later Dempsey strode across the ring to extend the winner's hand to a loser. After this gesture of condolence he started back, but a sharp, sudden outcry from the crowd halted him in the middle of the ring, where he bowed his appreciation.

That was the longest and loudest cheer of them all.

No doubt about the sympathies of a majority of that crowd.

Aside from just plain rooting, the final outburst was a strong vote against Sharkey's claim of foul. The great mass of spectators turned thumbs down on the Bostonian. Further proof of this was had when Sharkey left the ring a minute or two after Dempsey had disappeared. There were more boos than cheers for him then, although he had received a nice reception when he entered the ring. The mob sympathizes with a warrior knocked out completely, but not with one who falls as Sharkey did last night.

Public confidence in Dempsey's comeback was reflected in the post time betting, which was 6 to 5 and 11 to 10. It went to even money early last evening. Sharkey was quoted previously as high as 2 to 1, although the odds held around 8 to 5 most of the time.

84,000 Witness Dempsey-Sharkey Bout Is Report

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 22.—The attendance at the Dempsey-Sharkey bout last night was 84,000, and the gross receipts were $1,075,000. It was estimated today. These figures broke all records for both attendance and receipts for a non-championship fight.

For a non-championship bout the previous attendance record was 75,000 for Willard and Firpo and the previous record for receipts was $700,000 for the Wills-Firpo fight.

Officials At Battle Discuss Foul Charge

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 22.—Jack Sharkey was fouled just before he was knocked out by Jack Dempsey in the seventh round of their bout in the Yankee Stadium last night and Dempsey should have been disqualified according to Charles Mathison, one of the judges.

"While the referee is the sole arbiter of foul blows," Mathison said after the fight, "I am making the following report to the State Athletic Commission:

"Jack Sharkey was hit below the waist line immediately before the knockout punch and Dempsey should have been disqualified. Dempsey was also guilty of hitting low in several other rounds."

Jack O'Sullivan, the referee, said the blow which preceded the knockout punch was a fairly delivered one and landed right on the waist line, not below. O'Sullivan admitted that Dempsey landed below the waist line several times in the earlier rounds, but said he did not warn Dempsey because "in no case were the punches injurious or deliberate, nor was there any protest made by Sharkey previous to the final round."

Dr. William Walker, Boxing Commission physician, said he found no evidences of a foul when he examined Sharkey soon after the fight.

"When a man is really fouled," said Dr. Walker, "he doesn't stand up as long as Sharkey did. His legs give way completely.

"Dempsey was in good shape. His cuts about the eyes were trivial. When I examined Sharkey before the bout his condition was not quite as good as before the Maloney fight. Possibly he reacted more than Dempsey to the nervous strain."

Radiator Stars Top South Hill

The Radiator Stars defeated South Hills, 5 to 4, in a fast game played on the Boro field on Thursday night. The Stars secured their victory by batting in four runs in the seventh frame.

The Stars were behind going into the final inning, but they jumped on Cardella for enough hits to produce four markers. Gray and Wayman divided pitching honors for the Stars with Bradley behind the bat.

Nine Sport Writers Claim Blow As Foul

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 22.—Nine out of fourteen New York boxing writers asserted today that the much-discussed blow which Jack Dempsey delivered just before knocking out Jack Sharkey last night was a foul one. Gene Tunney, heavyweight champion, says he thought the questioned blow was fair.

NEW CASTLE-CLEVELAND IN DOUBLE HEADER

Locals Hope To Continue Streak

Jamieson And Meis To Twirl For New Castle In Twin Engagement

FIRST GAME STARTS AT TWO O'CLOCK

By "BUGS" WALTHER

Another bargain day attraction is slated for Centennial Field on Saturday afternoon. The Cleveland Tellings will oppose the New Castle-Youngstown combination, in a double-header. Tomorrow is designated as Booster Day. The first game starts at 2 o'clock daylight savings time.

The New Castle-Youngstown contingent has won their past five games, and they are out to make it six. A double victory tomorrow over the Tellings, while Canton or Massillon are losing will send the local stock on the rise. New Castle has a fine chance to cop the flag in the second-half of the league race, and they are bent on bringing the championship play-off to this city.

The Beaver Falls Elks captured the first-half, and a three or five game series with the Valley team, in the fall would pack the local park to capacity. Of course all this series business depends on the winning of the gonfolon.

It is understood that the Cleveland Tellings have added several new men to their roster and that they will give the New Castle-Youngstown team a hard fight for victory.

Jamieson-Meis to Pitch

Manager Steen has Jamieson and Meis ready to work the twin bill. Jamieson will more than likely work the first game, with Meis throwing them in the second tilt. Johnson is almost sure to pitch one of the games for the Tellings.

The locals have shaken off the batting slump, as shown by their even dozen blows in the Beaver Falls game on Wednesday night. The team as a whole shapes up better than any previous combination in this city. It was announced today that DeMont the new outfielder from Youngstown would patrol the right-field pasture in the double-header. DeMont replaces Brehanney who has left the local team for faster company.

With DeMont in right, Feigert in center, and Dunn in left the New Castle-Youngstown outfield shapes up as one of the strongest in the loop.

The infield with McCullough, Hunt, Lawrence and McCoy playing a snappy brand of baseball will be hard to beat. Greenae and Bryan will look after the catching in the twin bill. The two catchers will likely divide the burden.

Well Fortified

New Castle-Youngstown is well fortified with pitching material at present with at least six players who can enter the box if called on, or needed. Jamieson, Meis, Hospidor, Feigert, Steen and Flynn. Steen and Flynn can be used for relief work.

Tomorrow afternoon the directors of the New Castle-Youngstown team are going to give away that handsome sedan that has been seen at the ball park on several occasions. The holder of the lucky number will be given the car. The games are designated as Booster affairs and let's get behind the locals and show the support.

To Give Auto Away

New Castle is not far from the championship, they need your help and a little encouragement. The financial matters of the team have been somewhat cleared up by the fine attendance at the past several games, but there is still room for improvement.

The double-header is what you have been waiting for. Remember the first game starts at 2 o'clock, and the the second game will follow at a ten minute interval, so get to the park early if you want a seat. There are only about 2,000 seats available and after they are gone, the standing room only sign will be jerked out of the cupboard.

The winner of the automobile must be at the ball park tomorrow afternoon, it was stated today. So if you have a chance to win the car, don't fail to be present and if your number is called, well if you are asleep that's just too bad. There is not much chance though that you will be asleep, because the boys are going to give you your moneys worth in that double-header.

SORDS POINTS

Boy, Page Iron Man McGinnity

By NORMAN E. BROWN

William G. Andrews does not intend to retire from baseball at the close of this season—or next.

This announcement becomes interesting when it is pointed out that Andrews is now 58 years old, has been a factor in baseball for over 40 years, and may well be called the oldest ball player, at least on a regular league team, in the U. S.

Andrews now plays in what is known as the King Tut League at New Castle. Players must be over 30 years of age to be eligible.

He is serving as president of the Lawrence County Baseball League as well.

For four years, up to recent months, Andrews divided his time between stopping base hits and crooks, serving as sheriff of the county.

Ryantown To Play China Company Team

The Ryantown team of the Twilight League will play an exhibition game at six o'clock tonight at the Radiator field with the Homer Laughlin China Company team of East Liverpool, O.

The Laughlin team has held the championship of the East Liverpool district for two years and they are the flag winners for the first half of the season in the East Liverpool Industrial League.

A fast game is anticipated, as both teams are playing a fine brand of baseball.

Cardinals Are Showing Punch

Cards Down Giants As Pirates Drop Two; Cubs Lose To Phillies

YANKEES WIN ANOTHER GAME

By LES CONKLIN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, July 22.—The Cubs and Pirates are reeling around the National League ring like Jack Sharkey today, while the world's champion St. Louis Cardinals are apparently on the verge of pulling a Dempsey and regaining their proud position at the head of the pack. The Cubs are in first place again, but they got there by the somewhat negative method of losing only one game while the Pirates were losing two.

Having been walloped by the Giants, the Cubs tossed off a 7 to 3 decision to the Phillies yesterday. They now are only 2 1-2 games in front of the third place Cardinals.

Ray Kremer, Pittsburgh pitching ace, regained his early season form, but unfortunately Kent Greenfield regained his form of two years ago at the same moment. Each allowed only five hits, but the Braves won, 2 to 1, and then added insult to injury by taking the nightcap, 5 to 2.

The Giants, after tying the score with a brilliant five-run rally in the ninth at the expense of Haines and Alexander, tossed the game off to the Cardinals in the tenth, 7 to 6. John McGraw was put off the field for the first time in years during one of many wrangles.

Babe Herman uncorked a wild throw in the 13th and the Reds nosed out the Robins, 2 to 1. Luque and Spittin' Bill Doak twirled scoreless ball for nine innings.

The Yankees win whether they hit or not. They got only five bingles off Connally of the White Sox, but bunched four of them in the eighth and won, 4 to 1, while Hoyt subdued the enemy.

Although Goose Goslin got four hits, including a homer, in four times at bat, the Senators lost to the Browns, 5 to 4, when Bennett doubled with the bases full in the ninth. Darkness ended the second game when the score was tied at two-all at the end of the seventh. The Senators now trail the Yanks by 12 1-2 games.

Ty Cobb ran wild on the bases as the Athletics downed Cleveland, 8 to 3. Ty stole second and came all the way home when the Indians started throwing the ball around trying to catch him.

The Tigers won their fourth straight, swamping the Red Sox, 7 to 3.

Suzanne Lenglen To Retire At 30

Woman Champion Says Athletes Generally Through At 30 Years Of Age

By CHARLES A. SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, July 22.—Will Suzanne Lenglen, mercurial Pavlova of the lawn tennis world, be but a memory by 1931?

Convinced that a woman cannot be at her best at tennis after 30, Suzanne has decided that when she reaches that age—roughly in about three years—she will rest on her laurels and retire.

Acquainting reporters here with this decision, Suzanne declared that she had never been so happy as now; that she would not be an amateur again for worlds; that contrary to reports she has not lost friends through turning professional, and that in her opinion Betty Nuthall, the 16-year-old English girl, is the coming champion of the world.

"Up till 30, I think, a woman tennis player is all right. After that age, she begins to lose her skill. Therefore I am going to retire when I reach the age of 30. I want to finish at the very best of my form, I don't want to get bad and then retire. I shall retire when I am 30.

"I have never been so happy in my life, and would not be an amateur again for worlds, but I don't want to get stale. I do what I like. I just sign a contract, carry it out, and I'm finished. I have only to agree with a few people, while, as an amateur, I was expected to play, whether I was sick or not. I was besieged on all sides, and I had to please everybody—and I have not the mood for that. I am leading a quiet life now, and I like it."

Discussing the question of an open tournament being arranged so that both professional and amateur players could participate, Suzanne said it would be a fine idea, but refused to be drawn into any lengthy discussion about the merits of amateurism versus professionalism.

Giving one of her typical shrugs, she remarked: "The line between the two is such a fine one. What is the exact definition between the two? People have been trying to give one for years, without success, so I don't think I can do it."

"But what is the difference between a tennis player who plays for a fee and one who writes about tennis for a fee, and thus earns a living from the game?" she was asked. "Some do it, I know," she said, "but that I should not call hypocrisy. You must allow that the amateurs are experts and can give expert views which the public would like to have. I do not think that amateurs should be allowed to write about tournaments, however, because they cannot give proper attention to their writing or their own playing."

Gettysburg—Struggle for the Round Tops.

by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

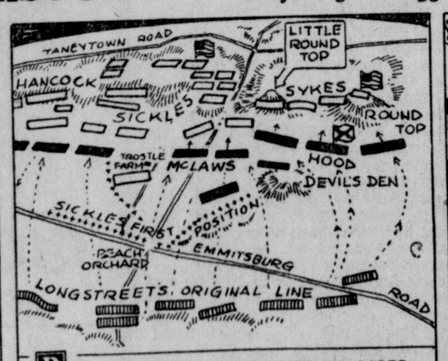
FEDERAL SIGNAL STATION ON THE SUMMIT OF LITTLE ROUND TOP

ON JULY 2, 1863, GEN. LONGSTREET WITH THE CONFEDERATE RIGHT WING ATTACKED THE PROJECTING ANGLE FORMED BY SICKLES' 3RD CORPS THROWN OUT IN FRONT OF THE TWO ROUND TOPS TO THE PEACH ORCHARD. IF LONGSTREET COULD HAVE CAPTURED THESE HILLS, BATTERIES PLANTED UPON THEM COULD HAVE RAKED THE UNION LINE AND CLEARED CEMETERY RIDGE OF FEDERALS.



BUT LONGSTREET DID NOT GET HIS CORPS INTO POSITION UNTIL AFTERNOON, AND IN THE MEANTIME LITTLE ROUND TOP HAD BEEN OCCUPIED BY A STRONG UNION FORCE. HOOD'S DIVISION MOVED AROUND THE FEDERAL LEFT AND FOUGHT DESPERATELY TO GAIN THE ROUND TOPS, BUT WAS UNABLE TO DISLODGE THE FEDERALS.

FIGHTING IN DEVIL'S DEN.

McLAWS' DIVISION AND PART OF HOOD'S WERE THROWN UPON DEVIL'S DEN AND THE RIDGE BETWEEN IT AND THE PEACH ORCHARD. THEIR FIRST CHARGES WERE REPULSED, BUT AT 6 O'CLOCK, THE ANGLE WAS BROKEN IN, AFTER HARD FIGHTING AND WITH GREAT LOSS ON BOTH SIDES.

FEDERALS ON THE SLOPES OF LITTLE ROUND TOP

A LITTLE LATER, SICKLES WAS BADLY WOUNDED AT THE TROSTLE FARM, AND HIS CORPS DRIVEN BACK TO THE CREST OF CEMETERY RIDGE. THE CONFEDERATE ADVANCE WAS FINALLY CHECKED BY FRESH UNION DIVISIONS SENT INTO THE FIGHT, AND DURING THE NIGHT MEADE DREW BACK MOST OF HIS LINE TO THE TOP OF THE RIDGE.

CONTINUED TOMORROW.

The Reward for Investing in REAL ESTATE

Apartments

EX-PRESIDENT Grover Cleveland once said, "No Investment on earth is so safe, so sure, so certain to enrich its owner as undeveloped realty. I always advise my friends to place their savings in realty near some growing city. There is no such savings bank anywhere."

The rise in real estate values has been the basis of more fortunes than any one other form of investment. Inherently sound, unmindful of every little business flux, real estate progresses steadily, sometimes spectacularly, toward the goal of profit. Offerings under our jurisdiction have had a remarkable record of success.

British Heir Brings Premier On Ranch Visit

Baldwin Will Accompany Prince Of Wales Next Month To Canada

Party May Include Some U. S. Cities In List of Official Stops

(International News Service)

OTTAWA, Can., July 22.—The United States may play host again to the Prince of Wales.

The Prince and Premier Stanley Baldwin of Great Britain are due to arrive in Canada early in August.

Although no official confirmation can be secured, it is regarded as quite likely that the prince will visit the United States after stopping at his ranch at High river.

There will be few actual public engagements during the visit of the Prince of Wales in Canada it is expected. Premier Stanley Baldwin will probably carry the chief burden of public appearances.

Visits Capital.

Of the Prince's three-day stay in Ottawa, only Wednesday, August 3, will be taken up with official duties. His Royal Highness, at noon on that day, will unveil the altar of sacrifice in the memorial chamber of the Victory Tower. At 3 o'clock he will unveil the statue of Sir Wilfred Laurier recently erected on Parliament Hill and at 4 o'clock he will visit the International Poultry Congress.

Premier Baldwin will address Canadian Clubs in Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto. While in the Capitol both the Prince's and the Premier's party will be guests at government house. Mrs. Baldwin will address the woman's Canadian Club in Ottawa.

After leaving Ottawa the two parties will go to Brockville, where they will board a private yacht and cruise through the Thousand Islands to Kingston, where there will be an hour's reception. They will proceed by boat to Toronto. In Toronto there will be a state dinner, as well as a Canadian Club luncheon, probably on Sunday the royal party will make an informal trip to Niagara. Afterward they will start for Banff, Alberta.

Baldwin Sails First

After leaving the Prince in Alberta, Premier Baldwin will start back, making hour stops at Calgary and Regina, with a somewhat longer stop in Winnipeg. From Manitoba the Premier will move right through to St. John, where there will be an official reception. In Halifax and Charlottetown there will be further receptions, and on August 18, Mr. Baldwin will sail for home.

From High River the Prince's plans are uncertain, largely depending upon his own wishes regarding the length of his stay. In any event, some programme of official stops at Western Canadian cities will be worked out for the trip East.

Chicago Studies Alimony Problem

Hundreds Of Chicago Men Paying Alimony To Wives, Is Claim

By FRANCIS F. HEALY
International News Service Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, July 21.—The alimony question has caused turmoil and heated waves of discussion in church pulpits, forums, societies, clubs and the three domestic tribunals here—the superior, circuit and domestic relations courts and all over Chicago.

A dozen questions of the alimony situation are under discussion. Leaders in legal circles and students of domesticity differ in their solutions of the problem.

Should a wife in this day of equal rights for women be compelled to pay a divorced husband alimony?

Should a wife be denied alimony if her life subsequent to the divorce is one of revelry and dissipation?

Should able-bodied childless wives be granted alimony?

Should men who refuse to pay alimony be lodged in jail?

Yes. No. Factions are divided on the subject.

Men Paying Heavily.

Chicago men are paying between $3,000,000 and $5,000,000 yearly to divorced wives.

Hundreds of men are confined in the county jail here for refusal to obey court alimony orders.

The current discussions began with the court action of Dr. Vernon B. Cooley, a Chicago dentist, who presented a petition asking that he be freed from his alimony payments on the grounds his former wife was living an immoral life. His petition set forth that his wife refused to marry an unnamed man with whom he alleged she was residing because such a marriage would terminate her alimony.

A judge in the superior court ruled that a wife's actions after a divorce have no bearing upon the financial obligation of the former husband.

A court of appeals sustained the original decision.

As attorneys for Dr. Cooley prepared to take the case to the supreme court, the dentist announced the organization of an alimony club. Only husbands who refused to provide alimony were invited to become members.

Mrs. Cooley then came to the front and stated that she had been married last January and that her second husband had since died. She thus, according to statutes, was not entitled to alimony.

That ended that question—but not the discussion.

Walter Brinkman, 27, then startled Chicago domestic circles by asking a judge to grant him alimony in his petition for a divorce from Mrs. Rose Brinkman.

Man Wants Alimony.

Brinkman stated he was suffering from tuberculosis and was unable to work. His wife, he said, was fully capable of supporting him. A judge in the superior court decided that the Illinois statutes make no provision to compel a woman of means to support an estranged husband.

Husbands immediately demanded to know why there was not such a statute. More discussion.

While legal savants were pouring through the law tomes, Mrs. Lillian Agnoff appeared with a petition requesting that a judge compel her former husband to support a child adopted prior to their divorce two years ago. Jacob Agnoff, the husband, classified the appeal as a "new bit of legal gold-digging." The judge ruled that alimony and support should have been asked at the time of the divorce.

When Hungry Youngsters Come in from Play

You cannot wonder that they need fuel for their engines, when you see the amazing amount of energy they burn up in tireless play. But you look at the clock—it's near supper time. One mustn't spoil their appetites for the evening meal. Something simple and nourishing but not too heavy is what you want.

Why not suggest a chocolate or maple custard? You'll be rewarded not only by wide grins but by the comforting knowledge that they are getting their all important quota of milk in a disguise so pleasing that it is looked upon as a special treat.

Your Oven Temperature Decides the Success of Custards

Custards are so simple to make that one is apt to grow careless or hurried in the baking of them. The result is a watery custard, none too appetizing to look upon and even less appetizing to eat. Baked in a slow oven—225°—until an inserted knife comes out clean, the resulting custard will be smooth, firm and creamy. For variety try chocolate, caramel, brown sugar and maple custards or combine them with fruits or with lady fingers. But the most important thing of all to remember in making custards of any variety is to use Carnation Milk.

The Creamiest, Smoothest Custards

If you want richer, creamier custards, custards with a finer texture and a greater smoothness—you'll never use anything but Carnation. There's very good reason for its exceptional success. The evaporation of Carnation to double richness gives a richer, creamier custard. The "homogenization" of the milk—a breaking-up of the cream globules into minute particles distributed uniformly throughout every drop of milk—creates a smoother, finer texture.

And what is true of custards is true of all other foods in which Carnation is used. Carnation gives in puddings, ice creams, cakes, soups, sauces and candies results which even the best of bottled milk cannot equal.

There are new food delights awaiting you in the use of Carnation Milk—new cooking economy and convenience. The Carnation Cook Book—"My Hundred Favorite Recipes"—is full of fascinating recipes. It's free. Won't you send for it? Address Carnation Milk Products Co., 100 Carnation Bldg., Oconomowoc, Wis.

Carnation Caramel Custard

2 cups Carnation Milk diluted with 2 cups hot water, ½ cup sugar, ½ tsp. salt, 5 eggs, 1 tsp. vanilla. Caramelize sugar by melting over a flame, add to scalded diluted milk in double boiler; when sugar dissolves add to slightly beaten eggs; add salt and vanilla; pour into buttered cups; bake in 225°F. oven, in deep pan of hot water.

17 Oil Companies Agree To Restrict Seminole Output

(International News Service)

OKMULGEE, Okla., July 22.—The gusher production of the Indian Territory Illuminating Oil Company, two and one-half miles south of the now famous Bowleys pool, has caused seventeen oil companies and individuals owning oil and gas leases surrounding it to sign agreements which will effect a drastic shut down of production in the territory.

An agreement was drawn by Ray Collins, shutdown umpire of the Seminole area, and provides that as soon as a well now about to be brought in, in the Little River pool, is opened up, all wells in the district will be restricted to 100 barrels of production per day, for a period of 100 days. This would materially decrease the overproduction in the fields at present.

It is estimated that it will require at least 100 days for completion of the new well in the Little River pool. Until it reaches completion all wells will be allowed to flow to capacity. The agreement also provides that not over 12 wells are to be started during the shutdown.

Missouri Courts Uphold New Law For Cigarette Tax

(International News Service)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 22.—Kansas Cityans soon will be required to pay a tax of 20 per cent on their cigarets, according to a decision rendered by the supreme court of Missouri. The city council passed an ordinance April 11, last, imposing the 20 per cent tax and requiring retailers of cigarets to pay a registration fee of $1. The tax was paid for several days.

Following the passage of the ordinance, a group of druggists filed a mandamus suit against Charles W. Regan, city clerk, to compel the clerk to receive notice of their intention to circulate referendum petitions against the ordinance. The supreme court held that the ordinance is an emergency measure under provisions of the city charter and therefore not subject to a referendum vote by the people. The court declared that the druggists in seeking the mandamus to compel the referendum on the act conceded its constitutionality.

"While we have no right to construe a law by our view of its expediency, we can take that feature into consideration in attempting to ascertain what was the legislative mind," Judge J. T. White wrote in the majority opinion.

"Kansas City would be in severe financial straits if every occupation tax could be held up by a referendum," the Judge said.

Coney Island Holds Lost Child Record

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 22.—More children are "lost" at Coney Island than any other place in the country, according to officials of the New York state prison commission.

In a report on the condition of the 28th police precinct at Coney Island the prison commission revealed that from May 30 to September 20, 1926, a total of 2,838 children were reported lost at Coney Island.

As high as 100 children were reported lost in one day last summer.

So many boys and girls have been lost at Coney Island in the last few seasons that this year five lost children's stations were established along the beach.

The prison commission said the police should not be compelled to look after all the "lost" children who are brought to the station house. The report said, in part:

"The police of this busy precinct should not be required to undertake the care of these children with the many other important matters in which their services are needed."

The commission recommended that representatives of the New York City police department confer with officials of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children in an effort to work out a plan which would provide for the case of the lost children and Coney Island.

Japan's "48 Dolls" To Have Palace

(International News Service)

TOKIO, July 22.—The 48 dolls, representing the states of the United States, which were sent to Japan as messengers of friendship from school children of America, are to live in an "Imperial Palace" all their own. The palace is to be especially designed and built under orders from the Empress of Japan.

The problem of housing the dolls was perplexing authorities of the Department of Education, due to the fact that the department still is housed in temporary buildings erected after the earthquake of 1923. When the Empress heard of the difficulty, however, she proposed to have a special palace built for them.

It is planned to erect a wooden building, modelled along the lines of the Imperial Palace at Tokio, built and furnished entirely in Japanese style. In this palace the 48 dolls will be housed, together with Japanese host-dolls which will be provided by the Empress. The palace will be provided with all the toys and playthings which make children happy.

A special commission in Australia has recommended the establishment in that commonwealth of a plan of national insurance to apply to all persons receiving wages or salaries.

Plan To Purify Merrimac River

(International News Service)

LAWRENCE, Mass., July 22.—Twelve Massachusetts cities and towns along the Merrimac river have joined in a co-operative movement to purify the water of the Merrimac river.

A plan whereby a trunk sewer, costing about $13,000,000 would be constructed, is now under consideration. A committee representing the entire group of communities, as well as representatives of Essex and Middlesex counties and the water power companies of Lowell and Lawrence are working on the plan.

The Merrimac valley from the New Hampshire border to the seashore at Newburyport where it empties into the ocean is dotted with industries dependent in part upon the waters of the river. Years of uncontrolled dumping of refuse into the river has done much to make its water impure. The construction of the proposed sewer would eliminate the use of the river for sewage drainage and restore to it its natural beauty. Health authorities have urged the sewer construction.

LONDON, July 22—England's heir to the throne turned pit-boy for an hour recently when he descended the Haig pit of the Whiethaven Colliery company, rode in a miner's tub thru the workings and at a point more than a mile under the sea, spent 30 minutes at the coal face during which he handled the pneumatic picks used in hewing the coal.

The prince wore blue dungaree overalls, black and white check scarf and a gray peaked cap. The outfit was voted by girls clustering around the pithead to suit him to perfection.
